Queen Unveils Friendship Arch

Visits Power Plant, 2 Locks Of Seaway

MASSENA, N. Y. (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II, after a three-hour delay caused by fog, unveiled Saturday a graceful aluminum arch — symbol of friendship between the United States and Canada and their joint 650-million-dollar St. Lawrence power project.

The Queen's weather luck, after a lapse, returned for the ceremony. A warm sun shone by the time she pulled a long golden cord to reveal the mirror - like black granite commemorative plaque.

Then the Queen and Prince Philip went to Cornwall, Ont., where they were greeted by the citizens and various officials.

The Queen crossed over to American soil for the first time on her royal tour of Canada. She came to visit the huge hydro electric power plant and two American locks of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

She had joined with President Eisenhower at Montreal Friday to open the seaway officially. Saturday, the queen journeyed out onto the 3,300-foot dam and, standing 68 feet above the swirling gray waters in earshot of churning generators, she unveiled a marker on the international border between the United States and Canada.

The royal yacht Britannia was unable to bring the Queen and her husband to the Eisenhower lock as originally scheduled.

After anchoring in the St. Lawrence Seaway in the morning because of the fog, the ship lifted anchor and proceeded to the Snell Lock, where the royal couple disembarked and proceeded the rest of the way by automobile.

Vice President Nixon, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and a large delegation of senators, congressmen and members of the diplomatic corps welcomed the pair.

Urge Fourth Dose Of Salk Vaccine

WASHINGTON (AP)—A fourth dose of Salk polo vaccine was officially recommended Saturday for all persons who completed the basic three shots a year or more ago.

Surgeon Gen. Leroy E. Burney of the Public Health Service made public, with his endorsement, a recommendation to that effect from a special committee of advisors he had asked to review the Salk vaccine situation.

There was no reference in the announcement to live polio vaccines, which thus far have not been approved by the service for general use in the United States. Burney said he expected to issue a statement on live vaccines in a day or two.

Soviet Defector Will Expose Spy Network In Burma

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Alexander Urevitch Kaznacheev, who fled the Soviet Embassy and took refuge in the U. S. Embassy, said Saturday he would expose the Communist spy network in Burma.

"The main occupation of all Soviet Embassy staff (in Rangoon) is to spy," Kaznacheev told a news conference.

Kaznacheev, 27, was information officer at the Soviet Embassy until Wednesday, when he sought asylum at the U.S. Embassy. The American Embassy released Friday a statement signed by him in which he declared: "I desire a life of freedom which is not possible for a citizen of the U.S.S.R."

The statement said he hated the Soviet regime because of its terroristic, subversive, and police state methods.

Kaznacheev was the second Soviet diplomat in Rangoon in recent weeks to defect, or seek to defect, to the West. In early May Col. Mikhail I. Stryguine, the military attache, was forcibly repatriated in a Communist Chinese plane after attempting suicide by taking sleeping pills and leaping out of a hospital window.

Kaznacheev shed some light on that incident at his news conference.

"The day before Stryguine was admitted to the hospital there was a secret meeting in the Soviet Embassy when Stryguine was severely criticized by members of the party, including Soviet Ambassador Alexi Shiborin," Kaznacheev said. "After the meeting Stryguine tried to commit suicide."

Shiborin has since been recalled to Moscow.

Kaznacheev said Stryguine knew a lot about the Soviet Embassy's spy network, but he could not say more now "for obvious reasons."

The former information officer appeared at the news conference wearing a white shirt, gray trousers, and a natty blue and white striped tie. He spoke in English with assurance, with hands on hips, after being introduced by Arthur W. Hummel Jr., an attache of the U.S. Embassy.

"I chose to seek the protection of the American Embassy because the United States is the leader of the free world's struggle against communism," he said.

When reporters asked him to explain the statement Friday that he had been asked "to spy on my Burmese friends," Kaznacheeve said Soviet diplomatic missions, "as also all other Communist bloc missions," maintain espionage activities in all countries where they are stationed.

As to Bermese engaged in subversive activities for the embassy, he said "all the names I know will be submitted to the proper authorities." He declined to give the names at the news conference.

Blame Thunderstorm For Airliner Crash

MILAN, Italy (AP)—A terrific thunderstorm was blamed Saturday night as "almost certain responsible" for the fiery crash of a TWA airliner. All 68 persons aboard perished.

"We still cannot say for sure that lightning was responsible for the disaster," said the Italian air force general heading the official inquiry. "But apparently the plane was hit by lightning."

Gen. Dulio Fanali, heading Italy's six-man investigating commission, said the first day of inquiry had indicated that "one way or another, yesterday's storm was almost certainly responsible for the tragedy."

In New York, an executive of Trans World Airlines expressed doubt that lightning or a thunderstorm were probable causes.

He did not express an opinion as to what he believed might have been the probable cause.

R. M. Dunn, TWA vice president for technical services, talked with newsmen at Idlewild Airport before boarding a plane for Rome to cooperate with Italian authorities in investigating the crash.

The TWA Constellation exploded almost two miles high and crashed in flames 15 miles north of Milan Friday on a flight from Athens to Chicago via Rome and Paris.

The bodies of the 59 passengers and 9 crew members were burned beyond immediate identification. Twenty-eight of the victims were Americans. Others were Italians, Greeks, Egyptians, British, French, Austrians, Chileans and Israelis.

By evening, all 68 bodies had been recovered from the wreckage. They were put in the coffins, placed in long rows in the woods near the wreckage.

Relatives in Italy of some of the victims were told they could try to identify their kin later.

Then the bodies were to be moved to Busto Arsizio, the nearest large town, for a funeral service Monday.

While recovering the bodies, disaster teams wept when they came upon the form of a small child clutching a woman, presumably the mother.

Study Teamsters Link In Arms Smuggling Plot

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate Labor - Management Committee disclosed Saturday it is investigating whether some Teamsters Union officials were involved in a plot to smuggle arms to foes of Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

Robert F. Kennedy, committee counsel, said a woman is a key figure in the case but that he has no plans now to call her as a witness. He declined to name her or others involved in advance of hearings Monday.

Kennedy told newsmen the gun smuggling is just one of several matters he plans to explore in the hearings before James R. Hoffa, president of the Teamsters Union, is called back for more questioning either Wednesday or sometime during the following week.

Kennedy made clear he was not accusing Hoffa of having anything to do with the gun smuggling effort, which apparently is one of several that have been thwarted by border patrol officials.

Hoffa and the committee wrangled bitterly Friday as to whether he has the desire or the power to crack down on racketeers the committee says his union harbors. Hoffa testified he would drive them out, but in his own good time after the committee quits its investigation.

As Kennedy told it, the arms smuggling plot was designed to get munitions to Fulgencio Batista, the ousted Cuban dictator who has taken refuge in the Dominican Republic since Castro's revolution deposed him.

Kennedy did not make clear whether the plot he mentioned is the one in which the border patrol at Miami, Fla., seized 13 persons and a C47 transport plane loaded with munitions allegedly bound for Batista.

Five Solons To Attend A-Test Ban Talks In Geneva

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five members of Congress and John A. McCone, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, will fly to Geneva Sunday for sessions of the East-West conference on banning nuclear tests.

State Department officials described the trip as routine. They said it would give the congressional advisers to the U.S. negotiators a chance to catch up on the latest status of the lengthy talks.

The congressional advisers departing Sunday and scheduled to return July 2, include the following members of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee: Sens. Albert Gore (D-Tenn) and Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R-Iowa) and Reps. Chet Holifield (D-Calif), Melvin Price (D-Ill), and James E. Van Zandt (R-Pa).

His granddaughter, Queen Elizabeth II, will see the same sights from a royal train July 9-10. Her lookout post will be a stainless steel scenic dome car.

See Wave Of Vetoes As Ike, Congress Differ On Spending

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower and the Democratic Congress are heading into a crucial test of divided government that could produce a wave of vetoes.

If these presidential rejections materialize, they are certain to harden Democratic opposition to administration requests for action, particularly in financial fields where budget balancing is involved.

Republican leaders in Congress expect Eisenhower to follow up his vetoes of tobacco and wheat bills last week with rejection of a $1,375,000,000 compromise housing bill.

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois already has raised the possibility that the President will take the unusual course of vetoing a $4,056,000,000 health-labor money bill that goes through his budget ceiling.

Lined up behind this are several measures which have been passed by the House or the Senate, but not both, in a form strenuously objected to by the administration.

These candidates for possible veto action include area redevelopment, veterans pensions, TVA financing, antipollution of water, and self-employment pension bills.

Congress has never overriden an Eisenhower veto.

Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas and House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex) have been laboring to trim down some of the Democratic-sponsored spending measures to avoid this rejection by the President.

The housing measure was one of these. But the President's reaction to their efforts in this case is expected to follow the line of the Republican National Committee which said the result added up to "a cheap political trick."

Democrats already are planning to capitalize in next year's campaign on Eisenhower's rejection of the wheat and tobacco bills. They are ready to add housing to this list.

The Democrats have made it clear also that they are not going to give Eisenhower increases in the gasoline tax and postal rates he said are necessary to balance the budget.

Although Congress voted to raise the ceiling on the debt limit, Democrats have put in cold storage the President's request for an increase in the 4½ per cent interest ceiling on long-term government bonds

Postpone Steel Strike Threat Until July 14

SEEKS RELEASE — Gov. Earl K. Long of Louisiana arrives at Covington, La., to appear on his writ of habeas corpus. (NEA Telephoto)

Long Hints Other Officials To Be Fired

COVINGTON, La. (AP)—Gov. Earl K. Long — still deeply angered over treatment that sent him to two mental hospitals—strongly hinted Saturday night that more Louisiana officials are going to be chopped down.

Already, in 24 hours of freedom, Gov. Long has banished three office-holders.

Meanwhile, one legislator, Rep. Jasper K. Smith of Caddo Parish—county—called on his colleagues to "explore the idea" of impeachment. Smith said citizens in his district are circulating a petition asking the House of Representatives to impeach Long, and "I hope it will snowball.

"He's made Louisiana the laughing stock of the country," Smith said.

Smith, a thrice-elected anti-Long man, said the governor "certainly appears irresponsible."

The latest indications of the 63-year-old governor's continuing anger came in an exclusive interview with James McLean of The Associated Press shortly before Long motored to his farm at Winnfield, La.

Gov. Long deserted his temporary statehouse at a Covington motel for only a few hours over the weekend, he said, because he pined to see the farm. Long's devotion to his Winnfield farm persisted over the years despite the "shack" tag hung on it by his estranged wife, Blanche.

One politician on dangerous ground, he indicated, was Tom Cangelosi, a trusted legal advisor for many years. Long apparently was miffed at Cangelosi's handling of the governor's confinement at state mental hospital.

One of Long's first moves when he was released from the hospital at Mandeville Friday was to fire State Police Supt. John Nick Brown. It was Brown's troopers who helped escort Long to Mandeville last week.

Long gained his freedom by ordering the state hospital board to dismiss State Hospitals Director Jesse Bankston and Dr. Charles Belcher, acting superintendent of the Mandeville hospital.

Before leaving, Long assured newsmen he would return to Covington Sunday night and there were indications to support the move.

At Covington, he would be only 30 miles from New Orleans and psychiatrists who are treating him. Then, too, he would be in a politically friendly neighborhood since St. Tammany Parish—county—is a Long stronghold.

Long took a devious path to Winnfield, and was careful to skip Baton Rouge entirely. He went to the state mental hospital at Mandeville last week — cursing, screaming and fighting — after Dist. Judge Fred Leblanc in Baton Rouge ordered him confined on application from Long's wife.

A joint statement from the doctors treating Long said they agreed to his wish to visit Winnfield. They said it might be a stimulus to regaining good physical condition. Dr. Paul Pratt went with Long and will be with him at all times, they said.

Find Woman's Body; Hold Pharmacist

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Further medical tests will be made in the unexplained death of a red-haired night club strip teaser whose nude body was found Friday night in the apartment of a convicted narcotics peddler.

Raymond I. Harris, St. Louis County cornoner, said an autopsy indicated the death of 24-year-old Mrs. Gloria Pascual was due to natural causes — air bubbles in the bloodstream. Harris said Mrs. Pascual was three months pregnant.

The coroner said exhaustive tests are under way to determine how the air bubbles got into the blood. He said his staff will try to determine whether an abortion was attempted shortly before her death. Harris said no inquest will be held for a week or 10 days.

Police of suburban University City are holding Marvin Roth, 29, a pharmacist who had been free on bond pending appeal of an eight-year federal prison sentence for peddling narcotics.

Bow To Request From Eisenhower

NEW YORK (AP)—The United Steelworkers of America bowed Saturday to a bid from President Eisenhower and delayed a steel strike threat for two weeks.

David J. McDonald, the union's president, agreed to extend existing contracts from their scheduled termination next Tuesday night to midnight July 14.

Eisenhower intervened at a time when steel talks were floundering worse than ever and an economy-crippling strike of the half million workers in the basic steel industry seemed inevitable. The President proposed that both the industry and union continue bargaining without interruption in production until all the terms and conditions of a new contract are agreed upon."

This amounted to an indefinite waiver of a union strike. McDonald accepted to the extent of two weeks — a period which he told the President "will provide ample time to conclude new collective bargaining agreements in good faith negotiations."

The union, on the other hand, by its acceptance, waived an earlier demand for assurance that whatever contract gains that are eventually negotiated be applied back to the original June 30 expiration.

McDonald said he was ready to resume stalled talks Sunday afternoon with an industry negotiating team headed by R. Conrad Cooper, executive vice president of U.S. Steel Corp.

Presidential intervention seemed to take both sides off the hook. The industry, refusing so far to grant any wage or other concessions on the ground they would spur inflation, now could make an offer in conformity with Eisenhower's request that a steel walkout be avoided.

The union, backed to the wall by the industry's refusal to propose contract gains, now has a two-week period to press its argument that steel profits and productivity gains warrant a sizable wage boost plus pension and other gains.

The government says worker earnings averaged $3.10 an hour in April.

The industry put off plans to bank furnaces and start shutting down facilities as scheduled when the Tuesday night strike deadline still stood.

Cooper issued a statement on behalf of the steel industry expressing pleasure about the union's unconditional two-week extension.

"The companies," Cooper said, "obviously are glad to continue operations under these circumstances."

Eisenhower's proposal to McDonald that the union delay its strike threat came as a reply to a previously undisclosed letter from McDonald asking the President to name a White House fact-finding commission to sift issues in the steel labor dispute.

The President turned down the fact-finding idea, saying this procedure is wisely confined by law to labor dispute emergencies affecting the national health and safety. Eisenhower also said the Federal Mediation and Conciliation

Schmidt Resigns As Monitor For Teamsters Union

NEW YORK (AP)— Godfrey P. Schmidt, the attorney who represents the reform movement within the Teamsters Union when it began two years ago, resigned Saturday as one of three court-appointed monitors of the union.

Schmidt said one reason for his resignation was a court ruling earlier this month which found an obvious conflict of interest in his activities as monitor and as attorney for employers dealing with the union.

On June 10 a federal appeals court in Washington ruled that James R. Hoffa, president of the Teamsters Union, and the union must obey reforms recommended by Schmidt and the other two monitors.

In the ruling the court questioned Schmidt's dual status as a monitor and an employers' attorney. The court made it plain, however, that it was not questioning that he conducted himself lawfully and in good conscience.

"While I do not agree with the legal reasoning of the Court of Appeals in this connection," Schmidt wrote in this letter of resignation—sent Friday to Dist. Court Judge F. Dickinson Letts in Washington—"I must respect and defer to their authority."

Hawaiians Vote On Statehood, Choose Party Nominees For Election July 28

HONOLULU (AP)—From Hilo to Honolulu, Hawaiians turned out in aloha-shirt heat Saturday to vote on statehood for their islands.

In a combined statehood referendum and primary election, islanders also chose party nominees for their first state election July 28—an election destined to send at least one Oriental to Congress.

Skies were clear and sunny over the island chain as the multiracial population went to the polls.

Voting was listless at the start. Only a trickle of residents of these leisurely islands got up for the 7 a.m. poll opening, but the number increased toward midmorning.

Election officials predicted close to 150,000 of the 174,000 registered voters would ballot before the voting places closed.

In advance of the vote counting, both Republican and Democratic leaders refused to read special partisan significance into the primary.

They took this view because Republicans ran unopposed for nominations to major offices, while Democrats were embroiled in vote-drawing intraparty contests.

The primaries decided candidates for two U.S. senators seats, one in the House of Representatives, governor, lieutenant governor and for the 76-seat first State Legislature.

Just about everyone around predicted an overwhelming "yes" from islanders in the plebiscite to transform their territory into a state.

The Hawaii Statehood Commission said its recent straw vote had shown 12 to 1 sentiment in favor of making these mid-Pacific islands into the 50th state.

Territorial Gov. William F. Quinn, 39, an Eisenhower appointee, ran unopposed for the Republican nomination for governor.

John Burns, 50, Hawaii's delegate to Congress, was assured of the Democratic nomination for governor to oppose Quinn July 28. He had taken primary opposition from insurance man Edward J. Hitchcock.

Burns, a onetime policeman, ran with backing of the Democratic organization and the endorsement of Harry Bridges International Longshoremen's Union. The union claims 24,000 Hawaii members working in the sugar and pineapple fields and on the docks.

The Republicans nominated Hiram L. Fong and Wilfred C. Tsukiyama to run for Hawaii's two U.S. Senate seats in July and Charles H. Silva for the lone House seat.

Fong, 52, a prominent businessman of Chinese descent, is a former speaker of the Territorial House. Tsukiyama, 61, a lawyer and territorial senator is regarded as an elder statesman among Hawaii's legislators of Japanese ancestry. Silva, 55, is Hawaii director of institutions.

On the Democratic side, there were contests for all three posts.

Hawaii has voted Democratic in the last five years after half a century of unbroken Republican domination.

In last November's general elections Democrats won nearly all major offices. That election brought out 154,800 voters out of an all-time high registration of 175,223 or an 88 per cent turnout.

Satchmo Making Quick Recovery, Eats Real Meal

SPOLETO, Italy (AP)—"Bring it all," Louis Satchmo Armstrong said Saturday. "I'm hungry."

But the great jazz man's wife, Lucille, vetoed Satchmo's having a baked potato, spaghetti, and a tomato stuffed with rice — all starches — at his first real meal since he fell ill with pneumonia Tuesday. So Satchmo had roast chicken, a green salad, and one of the starches, spaghetti.

He was grinning, laughing, and telling jokes as he lay back on his hospital bed in this town in the central Italian hills.

Armstrong has recovered so rapidly since overcoming the Thursday crisis in his illness that Dr. Alexander Schiff, his personal physician, hopes to move him to Rome Monday or Tuesday.

After a couple of more days' rest in the Italian capital, doctors believe Satchmo can fly to New York to spend his 59th birthday, on July 4, at home.

"I'm ready to leave right now," said Satchmo. "But I've got to wait for the doctors.

"When I was a boy in New Orleans, we didn't do it this way. If you got sick, Sister Jones would come over and rub goosegrease on your chest.

"If you ever had to go to the hospital, you were out and working again as soon as you were on your feet. We didn't have the money for all this modern recuperation idea."

Armstrong, who was to give a concert in Spoleto, said he hoped to be back at work blowing his trumpet in a couple of weeks.

Schiff may rule against Satchmo's resuming work quite that soon.

Carrollton Donates 139 Pints Of Blood

CARROLLTON— One hundred and thirty-nine pints of blood were received Thursday at the visit of the Red Cross Bloodmobile to the city of Carrollton. Fourteen would-be donors were rejected because of health conditions.

The Bloodmobile was stationed in the Knights of Columbus hall and the visit was sponsored by the Catholic Daughters of America with Mrs. Henry Thien as chairman. Donors were present from Carrollton, Kane, Eldred, Greenfield and Rockbridge.

The quota of 150 pints was not quite reached but so near that the county's participation in the Red Cross blood program would be assured could the county raise the $355 more money that is needed to complete the Red Cross quota for the year and insure the county's participation in the blood program.

New Berlin Girl To Attend FHA National Meet

Cecilia Reichart, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Reichart of New Berlin will be among the 2,000 teenage delegates to the 1959 National Convention of Future Homemakers of America, July 13-17, at the Conrad Hilton Hotel, in Chicago, Ill.

Miss Reichart and 114 other FHA'ers were chosen by the State FHA Association to represent Illinois at the National Convention. They will be accompanied by Catherine A. Carter, State FHA Adviser, who is a member of the State home economics education supervisory staff.

The five-day Convention, planned and carried out by the teenagers themselves, will give Illinois delegates opportunity to exchange ideas with FHA'ers from all states, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. Theme for the Convention, Blueprint for Action, is planned to help delegates find ways to use their new National Program of Work for 1959-62 through which they will emphasize developing their potential abilities, understanding family members, knowing the value of home economics education, and promoting good will at home and abroad.

A senior at New Berlin High school, Cecilia has been an FHA member since 1956 and has served as chapter treasurer and secretary and chairman of projects. While at the Convention she will have as her special responsibility attending special discussion groups.

In addition to her FHA activities Cecilia is a member of the following school and community organizations: Latin club, Girls Athletic club and Teen club.

Jersey County Crops Suffer From Drouth

JERSEYVILLE—Corn in many Jersey county areas was reported Friday afternoon to be suffering from lack of rainfall. With rain being received in many parts of the state the past week, Jersey county continued as a drouth center up to mid afternoon Friday.

John Varney of Otter Creek township, who was a township supervisor for many years, was a Jerseyville visitor Friday afternoon and reported that corn in the locality where he farms was beginning to show the effects of lack of rainfall.

Morris Dabbs, who operates a farm in the same township was also a Jerseyville visitor Friday afternoon and indicated that corn has already suffered some damage from the drouth.

Oscar Dabbs of the same vicinity was a Jerseyville visitor Thursday afternoon and reported that not only were corn fields and soy bean fields showing dry weather damage, but pastures were also getting short with grass turning brown from the rainfall shortage.

In the Jerseyville vicinity Thursday afternoon and Friday farmers were increasing their hauling of water for livestock and household purposes, and large water tanks were more in evidence than the smaller ones.

Water is an important factor in the raising of livestock and the increasing shortage will soon mean that farmers will cut their hogs and cattle numbers as they have done in former years of water shortage in this locality.

Keith Lee Reno, Sally Ann Kain Exchange Vows

JERSEYVILLE—Miss Sally Ann Kain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Joseph Kain of Grafton and Keith Lee Reno, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy R. Reno of Carrollton were married Wednesday by Justice of the Peace, Arthur Thatcher, in his offices on South State street. The single ring ceremony was used. The bride's mother, Mrs. Mabel Kain served as her attendant.

For her wedding the bride wore a dress of sapphire blue, of street length, and her accessories were white.

Mr. Reno is engaged in farming in Greene county and he and his bride will reside there.

Teen-agers can get through the stage of feeling gawky and long-armed by dressing carefully. During this period wear full sleeves for dress-up and select three quarter length sleeves or sleeves halfway between the elbow and shoulder for casual wear.

Scout District Committee To Meet Monday

Honest Abe District committee of Boy Scouts will meet Monday evening at the Congregational church in Jacksonville at 7:30 p.m. J. R. Davidsmeyer, district chairman for the Boy Scout District, has requested all institutional representatives and members attend the meeting for reorganization purposes.

The six operating committees of the district need to be fully staffed under the new chairmen, and appointments of planning committee chairmen will be made. There are now 40 sponsoring organizations in the three and a half counties of the district. Churches sponsor seven units, PTA groups sponsor 14, service clubs and veterans organization sponsor 11 and civic clubs the other nine.

Newest unit in the Honest Abe District is the Waverly Lions Club Troop 115 which was organized last month. All but two Boy Scout troops in the district have boys registered at Camp Illinek this summer. Over 240 boys are expected to attend. The camp is now in its second week, and will run for eight periods. The only vacancies that now exist are in the eighth period, which begins Sunday, Aug. 9.

Among other things the Boy Scout District leaders will discuss are two new programs for the golden anniversary year, 1960. Both these plans have an international aspect.

25 Years After Repeal

Bootlegging Is Still Booming

By JERRY BENNETT
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—Here's good news for imbibers who catch a bartender serving them rotgut when they order high quality whisky. You can call a Treasury Agent and stand a good chance of seeing the culprit go to jail.

Actually it's been against the law for years to water liquor or fill a quality label bottle with a cheaper brand. Reason is that the bartender may be making illegal profit at the expense of the federal Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Law.

High-proof liquors are taxed more than low-proof brands. Uncle Sam feels he's getting cheated if a bartender stocks up on 86-proof booze and sells it at 100-proof prices.

Getting a conviction, however, has required T-Men to show in court that the behind-the-bar manipulations actually cost the government money. Proving a tax fraud in such cases is so difficult, they say, that culprits often go free.

But as of July 1, it's a federal offense to tamper with liquor in any way. Violators can be jailed up to a year and fined up to $1,000 for each offense.

It's the latest in Uncle Sam's moves to stamp out alcohol tax violations which cheat the government of hundreds of millions of dollars a year. Agents of the Treasury Department's Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Division explain, however, that illegal profits made by crooked bartenders are trifling compared to the money Uncle Sam loses each year to moonshiners.

Although Prohibition has been dead for a quarter of a century, making and shipping bootleg booze is still one of the nation's most profitable illegal enterprises.

Officials of the Licensed Beverage Industries, Inc., a liquor manufacturers' trade association, estimate that bootleg booze profits total at least 736 million dollars a year.

There are many factors contributing to the flourishing bootleg business. One is the demand for liquor in the so-called "dry" counties throughout the country. Another is the existence of illegal bars and gambling joints that can't get liquor licenses.

Sometimes the problem boils down to a simple matter of taste. A Treasury agent explains:

"Strangely there are a great number of drinkers who prefer the taste of moonshine to legitimate distilled liquor. Also some find the price of tax-paid liquor too high for their purse."

The average price of moonshine is between four and five dollars a gallon. The tax alone on a gallon of legitimate 100-proof whisky is $10.50.

Recently T-Men started a drive to cut off the moonshiners' supply of raw materials. Merchants were asked not to sell sugar and yeast to persons who placed extra large orders for these ingredients. They also were warned that a fine or prison sentence awaited any merchant or wholesaler who knowingly sold these ingredients to a bootlegger.

T-Men believe that the campaign has been highly effective. They explain that recent raids on illegal stills reveal that the operators are being forced to use syrup and molasses in place of sugar. When sugar is found, it's usually in very small amounts.

Many violators have admitted that they have been forced to travel hundreds of miles to find new sources of supply. Agents are on the alert to stamp out any sugar smuggling operation that might arise due to the campaign's success.

Last year T-Men seized 9,182 illicit distilleries along with 4,700,000 gallons of mash and 213,000 gallons of liquor. About 11,000 persons were arrested.

T-Men explain that about 90 per cent of the violators are Southern backwoods moonshiners. What their Northern colleagues lack in numbers, however, they make up in professional know-how and the size of their operations.

Last year agents raided an old factory on Long Island which had been turned into a distillery that was turning out 1,600 gallons of alcohol a day.

THIS ILLICIT DISTILLERY was so large that it had to be destroyed by explosives.

WHEN IN NEED, A TELEPHONE CALL—

For-Hire Homemakers Ease Lot Of Many Families

By ALICIA HART
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)— Welfare agencies are hiring substitute mothers to save hundreds of needy children each year from growing up in orphanages and foster homes.

This boon to family preservation is called homemaker service. It provides experienced welfare workers to help raise children in homes where one of the parents has died or been hospitalized for a long-term illness.

Here's a typical example of how it works: One day a worried father walked into the local welfare agency and asked for help. His wife had just been committed to a mental institution for an indefinite period of time.

He had been left with four small children. Since the father couldn't take care of them and hold down a job at the same time he wanted to place them in foster homes until his wife recovered.

A social worker explained that for a small sum the agency could send a woman to look after the children and manage the household each day until he got home from work. The father agreed. The result was that he and the children were spared the heartbreak of separation while the mother was away from home.

In addition to pinch-hitting for missing parents, homemakers are called on to help in other types of cases. For instance, they help parents who have children with serious ailments such as mental retardation. Since the afflicted child requires a lot of care, the mother often doesn't have time to devote proper attention to her other children. The homemaker takes care of these youngsters for her.

Another type of case occurs when a woman returns home from the hospital after having a baby.

The homemaker looks after the older children while the mother recovers and gets used to caring for the infant.

Homemakers also advise mothers on how to raise children and do housework efficiently. Welfare agency officials explain that such tips have proved especially useful to widows who have several young children. In many cases, mothers who felt incapable of raising their youngsters would have turned them over to foster homes if it hadn't been for the homemaker's help.

Homemakers have proved highly beneficial in aiding elderly folks. By relying on a welfare worker to do the shopping and difficult household chores, feeble oldsters are often able to live happily at home instead of having to move to an old folks' institution. Often homemakers provide nursing care for elderly people who are ill.

There are about 150 welfare agencies in 32 states and the District of Columbia that offer these services. Each one pays the salaries of its homemakers, which range from amounts of less than a dollar to $1.80 an hour. The family is charged for all or part of the costs according to its ability to pay.

Some agencies are financed by private donations. Many receive funds from organizations like the Community Chest, United Givers Fund and cancer, heart, tuberculosis and polio societies. Others are supported by state and federal welfare appropriations.

For-hire homemakers can appear like ministering angels to a husband who is left alone with the children and dirty dishes.

Officials of the U. S. Children's Bureau explain that homemaker service holds excellent opportunities for women interested in social work. Most homemakers are between 40 and 60 years old and have raised families of their own.

If hired by a welfare agency, they undergo several weeks of training which includes courses in mental health, practical nursing and the care of elderly people and children. They also receive pointers on planning meals, food buying, home management and planig special diets.

Homemaker programs have proved so successful that health officials and social workers believe more communities should establish them. In fact, U. S. Children's Bureau Chief Katherine Oettinger believes labor and management should take an interest in promoting this service. She declares: "Both industry and unions have a stake in assuring the high productivity of workers by supporting homemaker services. We would welcome their participation in a plan which would assure for workers in industry everywhere the peace of mind that comes from the knowledge that their families are protected in cases of crisis."

Judith Griswold Of Greenfield Is Bride

GREENFIELD — Miss Judith Ann Griswold, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Griswold of Greenfield, and Donald Paul Sample, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Sample of Rockbridge, were married Sunday afternoon, June 14, in a double ring ceremony in the Rockbridge Methodist church.

The Rev. Ward Spencer of the Medora Baptist church officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father. The couple exchanged vows before an altar banked with ferns and palms.

Miss Merrilie Eva McQuerry served as the bride's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were the Misses Sherry Lou Sousley and Rose Ellen Maupin. La Chele Peters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Randall Peters, was flower girl, and Ricky Roberts, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Roberts, carried the rings.

Earl Wahl acted as best man for the bridegroom. His other attendants were James Reiter and Donald Lindholm, both of Chicago.

Ushers were Joe Longmeyer, Gene Longmeyer, and Richard Miller. Miss Nita Ford was organist and Ben Strode was soloist. Miss Carolyn Sue Sample and Miss Janet Kay Griswold were candlelighters.

The bride wore a gown of nylon net and lace over taffeta styled with an appliqued lace bodice trimmed with sequins and pearls. Her veil of net and lace was attached to a crown of sequins and pearl and she carried a fan bouquet of stephanotis and pink roses.

The attendants were attired in identically styled dresses of tiered eyelet organdy. The maid of honor's gown featured a pink cummerbund, and she carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The bridesmaids, who had blue cummerbunds, carried bouquets of blue carnations.

The girl whose wardrobe is composed entirely of sweaters, skirts and blouses might pause to reflect that a little planning might give her some really handsome one-piece dresses. In good wools and silks, these could create a wardrobe of distinction to replace the oddments.

A few simple exercises each day will tone up muscles and also ward off aches and possible strains we get from unaccustomed energetic activity.

Bizaillion-Kraut Rites In Calhoun

HARDIN—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bizaillion are residing on a farm in the Gilead vicinity near Hardin following their wedding Saturday morning at St. Barbara's church in Batchtown. The pastor, the Rev. James Telken, officiated at the ceremony, and said the Nuptial High Mass. The bride is the former June Kraut, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kraut of Batchtown, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bizaillion of East Hardin.

White gladioli arranged with greenery adorned the main altar of the church, and pews for the immediate family were marked with miniature wedding bells. Miss Angeline Sievers played the wedding marches and organ accompaniment for the parish choir which sang the Mass and for the soloist, Mrs. William Stelbrink, who sang an "Ave Maria" and "On This Day O Beautiful Mother."

The bride had her sister, Miss Linda Kraut of St. Louis for her maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. William Sweetman, sister of the bride, Miss Virginia Bizaillion, sister of the groom, and Miss Rosie Lorsbach.

Louis Sagez, Jr. was best man for his cousin, while William Sweetman, Tom Lorsbach and Donnie Winkler were groomsmen. Seating guests were Jim Kraut, brother of the bride, and Gene Sagez, Debbie and Pat Kraut, small sister and brother of the bride, were flower girl and ring bearer.

Given In Marriage

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white chantilly lace and nylon tulle, fashioned with a batteau neckline and short sleeves. The floor length bouffant skirt was enhanced with a peplum of lace. Her bouquet was of orchids and stephanotis, to which white satin streamers were attached, and her fingertip veil of illusion was held secure by a headband of pearls and sequins.

The bride's attendants were in identical ballerina length frocks of Schiffli embroidered pink tulle with batteau neckline and bouffant skirts. They wore matching headbands of tulle adorned with seed pearls, and they carried carnations in colonial bouquets to match their gowns. The flower girl wore a miniature version of the bridesmaids' gowns, and carried rose petals in a dainty basket. The ringbearer carried the rings on a white satin pillow.

At the end of the Mass, the bride placed a bouquet on the altar of the Blessed Virgin, while Mrs. Stelbrink sang, "Mother, at Thy Feet I'm Kneeling."

Following the ceremony, the wedding party and immediate families had breakfast at Wittmond hotel in Brussels. From 2 to 4 in the afternoon, the couple received their friends at the Hardin school cafeteria, and guests were invited to a wedding dance at the American Legion Hall in Hardin that evening. After the dance the couple left on a brief wedding trip.

Pott Maintains Lead In Chicago Open With 202

CHICAGO (AP) — Johnny Pott, 23-year-old newlywed seeking his first golf tournament victory as a pro, continued as pacesetter in the $57,000 Chicago Open Saturday with a third round of 72 for a 54-hole tally of 202.

The drawling former LSU collegiate star, who now registers from Shreveport, rallied from a wind-blown 38 on the first nine to a closing 34. He tacked his 72 to previous rounds of 63 and 67.

His 202 total, 8 under par for the distance over the tricky 6,350-yard, par 36-35—70 Glenneagles course, left him with a three stroke lead over his chum, Bo Wininger of Odessa, Tex. The veteran Wininger had 37-36—72 for a 206 total.

Only a stroke away at 206 was Arnold Palmer, the 1958 Masters champion.

Ken Venturi, the defending champion, had one of the day's best rounds. He authored 33-35—68 for a 207.

Others firing 68s were Jim Ferree for 211, Lionel Hebert for 209, and Bill Collins for 211. The best round was Tommy Bolt's 67, leaving him grouped at 208 with Ted Kroll, Fred Hawkins and Gene Littler. Sam Snead and Don Whitt were with Hebert at 209. Tom Nieporte and Billy Maxwell were at 210.

The field was trimmed to the low 60 scorers and ties, the cutoff coming at 219, for Sunday's stampede for the $9,000 first prize.

Don Fairfield of Casey, Ill., ended the day with a score of 70-71-71—212.

Whole World Gets On Newly-Crowned Champ's Bandwagon

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The whole wide world climbed on the Ingemar Johansson bandwagon Saturday while Promoter Bill Rosensohn, a $40,000 loser, planned a million - dollar - plus rematch in September.

The 26-year-old Swede looked ahead to a rosy future, strewn with dollar bills, after stopping Floyd Patterson with his "thunder and lightning" right hand in 2:03 of the third round Friday night at Yankee Stadium. The mystery right he hid in training now rules the heavyweight division.

Rosensohn, haggard and worn, said he would take a vacation before getting down to serious work on the rematch. As he holds an iron clad contract for the fight, he can afford to wait. The boy promoter, who lost 20 pounds during his ordeal, said he will not start talking date, or site until July 20.

"I have the contract, calling for a rematch in 90 days," he said. "The site is to be in the United States with the city to be determined by me. Johansson's entire purse will be held in escrow until the rematch under terms of the contract."

Rosensohn revealed a gross gate of $470,712 and explained that the $100 tops made this amount possible. He admitted that many of the $100 customers did not show up. As the promoter got half of the net gate of $203,569 (half of $407,139) and his expenses ran to about $245,000, he lost a little over $40,000.

"I will be in complete charge of everything next time," said Rosensohn, who did not share in the theater-TV-radio-movie money this time.

Johansson was swamped with offers from all sides, including Hollywood. Cables from all points of the globe included one from Prime Minister Tage Erlander of Sweden, whose government wants to outlaw boxing.

The new champ, still not quite used to his title, had a light breakfast and then watched the fight movies.

During the seven knockdowns in that furious third round, Ingemar grinned and said, "There's just no end to all these knockdowns." There was an end, though, and it was a shock heard around the world.

As for the rematch, Johansson said he was not sure it would be held in 90 days because "I think Patterson will need more time."

Patterson was resting at his home in Rockville Centre, N. Y. Cus D'Amato, his manager, said Patterson definitely would be ready to go again in 90 days.

Bagdad In Easy Derby Triumph

INGLEWOOD, Calif., (AP) — Bagdad, the lone bright star in an otherwise lackluster field of seven 3-year-old colts, swept to an easy victory in the $112,000 Hollywood Derby Saturday.

Made the favorite at odds of about 1 to 5, the Kentucky colt breezed in by 10 or more lengths with Jockey Willie Shoemaker enjoying the ride.

Worshiper from the Llangollen Farm was second and King O'Turf from King Bros. Stable third in the 19th running of the mile and one-quarter derby.

The time was 1:59 3-5.

Bagdad is owned by oilman Howard Peck of Los Angeles. While this was his first stakes triumph, the dark brown son of Double Jay raced a powerful second to Sword Dancer in the Belmont Stakes two weeks ago in New York.

FAN BREEZES

BY STAN SPOTTS

Journal-Courier Sports Editor

It has been several years since I've come in contact with any Major League ball players but Friday morning I broke the spell by calling Harmon Killebrew of the Washington Senators in Kansas City. The pleasant-voiced young third sacker, who leads the American League in home runs, runs and runs batted in, gave me some interesting facts on his father, Clay. I'll admit I was a little nervous at first and he seemed a little reluctant to talk to a stranger. But we found we had a lot in common through mutual acquaintances in the Senator organization.

A few were Ernie Orviz, Mel Krestes, George Myatt, now a coach with the Chicago Cubs, Dean Stone, Bob Oldis, Jack Rossitter, a scout, and Dick Hyde. Before the interview was over, he was asking me the questions and I was answering. The 5-11 195-pounder rooms with Bob Allison, who has something like 19 or 20 homers to his credit. I told Harmon he'd better get a couple of homers in this weekend series with the A's or Colavito was going to catch him. He merely laughed and said it looked as though it might rain.

I told him a few of the fans around here were beginning to show some interest in the Senators because of him and his dad, who was a whale of a football player at Jacksonville High in the early 1900s. He said he often heard his dad mention Jacksonville and he wanted to know how far it was from St. Louis, Chicago and Kansas City. I believe he is interested in visiting our fair city. Harmon will celebrate his 23rd birthday this Monday. The youngster was the first 'bonus baby' in the Washington chain and that signing came when he got out of high school at the tender age of 17 in 1954. At that time a bonus beauty had to spend two years with the parent club. In '56 he was farmed out to Charlotte and stayed there through 1957. He came back in '58 with the parent club and it looks as though he'll be there quite a spell.

—0—

In trying to clear up a few dead ends on his father's career, Harmon was just a little bit in the dark on a few of the dates but he cleared up a few questions. He was under the impression that his dad graduated from JHS and that he went on to play a year at James Millikin before heading for West Virginia Wesleyan. In 1917 Clay married Katherine May also from Nebo and they migrated to Payette, Idaho and spent a short time in Portland, Oregon. They returned to Payette, where they've made their home ever since. Clay engaged in commercial painting and did a little farming with his father-in-law. Clay, who also excelled in track as a Crimson, died at the age of 59 in 1952. Death came in February. The elder Killebrew, who was a high-stepping fullback that led the 1914 team to an undefeated season, lost an eye in the summer of 1913 trimming a hedge row. A hedge thorn pierced his right eye.

Harmon said his mother is planning another visit, possibly sometime in July, to Mrs. Oran Couch at 521 E. Washington in Pittsfield. Mrs. Killebrew visited Mrs. Couch last summer but her boy hadn't reached the prominence he now enjoys. Harmon has two older brothers. One edits a weekly newspaper and another is a linotype operator. Harmon is married to a school-day sweetheart and they have two sons. In the off season, he does public relations work for the Payette (population 1800) Gas Company, making speeches, etc. From the conversation, I'd have to say the modest, unassuming slugger is going to enjoy even greater success as a third baseman in the American League.

—0—

It isn't a known fact but it is believed that Clay named his younger son after the late William T. Harmon, who coached at Illinois College when Clay was playing at Jacksonville. Former teammates say Clay held the highest regard for the Blueboy mentor.

Scherer Defeats Art Hoff In Amateur Finals

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP)— Bob Scherer of Decatur dropped a 35-foot birdie putt on the first hole of the Illinois State Amateur Golf Tournament Saturday and went on to defeat Art Hoff of Barrington, 5 and 3.

The 28-year-old milkman set the pace throughout 33 holes to win his first state amateur championship. Although he faltered on the 29th and 30th holes, Scherer's lead was too wide for Hoff to close.

Winds of 30 to 35 miles an hour helped force the winner's score to 10 over par. Scherer won the Decatur city championship five times and played in the state tourney twice before this year's meet.

Indians Bow To Boston, 6-4

CLEVELAND (AP)—A two-run homer by Ted Williams and a home run by Jackie Jensen with the bases empty powered the Boston Red Sox to a 6-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians Saturday.

Frank Sullivan pitched 7 2-3 innings in gaining his fourth victory of the season to go with five defeats. He was relieved by Tom Brewer in the eighth inning with two men out and runners on first and second. Brewer struck out Granny Hamner to end the threat.

Sullivan gave up 8 hits, struck out 5 batters and walked 4.

The Red Sox scored a run in each of the first two innings and added their other four in the fifth off Jim Grant, the Cleveland starter who lost his third game in eight decisions. Williams' homer, a blast into the right field stands, and Jensen's shot into the left field stands were the big blows of the four-run rally.

Detroit KO's Baltimore, 12-2

DETROIT (AP) — Gus Zernial celebrated his 36th birthday Saturday by breaking into Detroit's starting lineup for the first time this season and smashing two home runs in the Tigers' 12-2 triumph over the Baltimore Orioles.

Zernial took over at first base in a desperation move by Manager Jimmie Dykes because the other first basemen, Gail Harris and Larry Osborne, have been in season-long slumps.

Zernial drove in five runs with two tremendous wallops into the upper left field seats. He connected off ex-teammate Billy Hoeft with one on in the second inning, then off Arnold Portocarrero with two on in the sixth.

Before Saturday, Zernial had played only two innings in the outfield and had been to bat only 17 times.

Zernial's blasts helped right-hander Paul Foytack coast to his sixth victory.

Wright Captures Women's Open

PITTSBURGH (AP — Mickey Wright caught fire with a hot putter Saturday and shrugged off bogeys on the last three holes to win the Women's National Open Golf title for an unprecedented second time with a record 72-hole total of 287.

Trailing by two strokes at the end of 36 holes, the blonde belter from San Diego, Calif., forged ahead with a 1-under par 69 on the morning round and finished with a 1-over-par 71, two strokes better than Louise Suggs.

Miss Suggs of Sea Island, Ga., the leader at the halfway mark with 145, folded on the morning round with a 5-over par 75 but came back with a sparkling 69.

It was a repeat of last year's Open that was won by Miss Wright with a 290. After starting with a 74 last year, she staved off Fay Crocker's second round of 68 and won by five strokes over Miss Suggs.

Ruth Jessen of Seattle, Wash.; Joyce Ziske of Waterford, Wis., and Marlene Bauer Hagge, the host club pro, all finished with 292.

The next closest competitor was veteran Patty Berg of West Chicago, Ill., who shot her first ace in 29 years and finished with 296.

Three-time winner Betsy Rawls of Spartanburg, S. C., shot a 297.

The National Amateur champion, Anne Quast of Everett, Wash., paced the amateur delegation with a 299 total.

Ingemar Johansson Refused To Fight In 1952 Olympic Finals, But He Erased Ugly Scar Friday

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The new heavyweight boxing champion of the world is a handsome young Viking who, in his pin-striped suit and button-down collar, might pass for a Madison Avenue advertising executive or stroke on the Harvard crew.

Ingemar Johansson has none of the dark grimness of beetle-browed Max Schemling nor the lumbering awkwardness of titanic Primo Carnera, the last two Europeans to hold the crown.

Ingemar's fair, boyish features are unmarked by 22 all-conquering battles in the ring. He has short-cropped hair, steel gray eyes and a pleasant, ready grin.

Although 26, he acts like an enthusiastic schoolboy. He is deceptive. To look at him, there is no hint of a fighter's physique—broad muscled shoulders and a rapier-like right hand which was able to smash Champion Floyd Patterson to the canvas seven times in the third round at Yankee Stadium Friday night.

The boys of so-called cauliflower row laughed at Ingemar's mysterious right hand — the biggest publicity farce of all-time, some jeered. Ingemar went ahead with the joke.

Then Friday night he unleashed the right hand on Patterson's chin. It was like a thunderbolt.

"I told you about my right," Ingemar kidded his detractors. "It is no joke."

They lauched at Ingemar's training routine in the lush confines of the swank resort at Grossinger, N. Y. The happy Swede avoided the spartan rigors of his predecessors. He trained in luxury with his family and friends at his elbow.

He insisted they all come along —Papa Jens, a pale and worried Goteborg stonecutter; Mother Ebba, busy and efficient, serving up her Swedish meat balls; his shapely fiancee, Birgit Lundgren; brothers Henry and Rolf and Sister Eva, just 16, and Rolf's flaxen-haired girl friend, Annette.

"Ingemar's family is all around him but he is the boss," said one camp attache.

Throughout his training and right up until the moment he stepped under the glaring klieg lights, Johansson was perfectly relaxed.

"He is either the most assured man in the world or perpetrator of the biggest con job in ring history," said another associate, it wasn't a con job.

Johansson speaks good English —clipped in spots—and is both vocal and forthright.

I don't like to hunt," he once said. "I couldn't stand to kill a deer or any other animal. I love all animals, especially dogs—little dogs you find on the streets."

How can such a soft-hearted individual turn into a fierce ring assassin such as that which hammered Patterson into a bloodied heap?

"That is different," he says casually. "When I am in the ring I assume the other man is in there to hurt me. I know it is my job to hurt him before he hurts me."

Johansson is a national idol in a country where boxing is looked upon with a certain amount of disdain.

He is said to be the top male model in Sweden. He lends his name to a number of products, including a Swedish-made automobile. He owns a construction company and a fishing trawler. Before this fight it was estimated he was worth $300,000.

Why did Ingemar want to fight Patterson? The seed was sown in a smoky upstairs areana in Helsinki, Finland, seven years ago.

In the 1952 Olympic Games in the Finnish capital, Ingemar, a fuzz-faced 19-year-old, advanced to the heavyweight boxing finals against Ed Sanders, a big, powerful Negro from America later fatally injured in a Boston ring.

Ingemar entered the ring, his arms and legs seemingly paralyzed with fear. He refused to fight. The referee warned him once. The referee warned him a second time, then a third. The crowd booed and hissed.

Finally when Johansson continued to run, the referee, in open disgust, disqualified him. Disgraced, Ingemar was led from the ring amid catcalls and jeers.

When time came to award medals, the No. 2 rung on the Olympic stand, reserved for Johansson, was left vacant. The Swedish anthem never rang. The silver medal was denied him and his name was erased from the Olympic records.

"For shame," screamed Swedish newspapers.

It was a scar which many said could never be erased. But those who said it reckoned without the driving urge for redemption which burned in the chest of the boy from Goteborg.

We saw the shame in Helsinki. We forgot it seven years later in Yankee Stadium, New York. Ingemar's fighting heart and explosive right hand destroyed the picture. He had settled accounts with the world.

Intentionally Collects $55,900

CHICAGO (AP) — Brookfield Farms' Intentionally equalled the world record of 1:38 1-5 for one mile while winning the $55,900 Warren Wright Memorial Stakes by 2½ lengths at Washington Park Saturday.

A crowd of 18,144 saw the winner lead all the way and tie the mark set by Swaps at Hollywood Park on June 9, 1956.

Swaps, a 4-year-old, carried 128 pounds. The 3-year-old Intentionally had 121 up, including Jockey Manuel Ycaza.

Calumet Farm's On-and-On finished second.

Little Tytus was third.

The 4 to 5 favorite, Intentionally, paid $3.60, $2.40 and $2.40.

The victory was worth $$32,800 to Harry Isaacs, owner of the winner.

Simpson's Grand Slam Carries Pale Hose To 5-4 Win Over Yanks

CHICAGO (AP) — Harry (Suitcase) Simpson's grand-slam homer with two out in the eighth inning offset four solo homers by the New York Yankees Saturday and carried the Chicago White Sox to a 5-4 victory.

Simpson smashed Bob Turley's first pitch off the right field facade for his third homer of the season and the fifth grand-slam of his career. Norm Siebern and Bill Skowron hit back-to-back homers to open the ninth to shave Chicago's lead to one run.

Going into the eighth, New York held a 2-1 lead on a pair of homers by Hector Lopez. Aside from that, the Yankees had done little against Bob Shaw who departed in the eighth for a pinch batter but collected his sixth victory against two defeats.

Turley, who took his eighth loss against six victories, retired the first two batters in the eighth before Nellie Fox drew a walk. Earl Torgeson singled and Sherm Lollar also walked to fill the bases for Simpson's tremendous drive.

Olmedo, McKay Pace Men Favorites In Wimbledon Tourney

WIMBLEDON, England (AP — Top-seeded Alex Olmedo of Peru and his U.S. Davis Cup teammate, Barry MacKay, paced a phalanx of men's favorites into the quarter-finals Saturday while upsets rocked women's ranks in the All-England Tennis Championships.

Christine Truman, the 18-year-old British amazon who was favored for Althea Gibson's vacated title, went down before the steady stroking of tiny Yola Ramirez of Mexico 6-3, 6-2. The main American hope, Mrs. Beverly Baker Fleitz of Long Beach, Calif., lost to Edda Buding, a German political refugee, 8-6, 2-6, 7-5.

Olmedo crushed Torben Ulrich of Denmark 6-3, 6-3, 6-2. MacKay, a 23-year-old from Dayton, Ohio, smashed past left-handed Billy Knight of Britain 6-2, 8-6, 10-8.

Age and a Frenchman overtook 45-year-old Gardnar Mulloy, Uncle Sam's lone other male contender. The Miami, Fla., veteran lost to Jean-Claude Molinari 6-1, 6-2, 7-9, 6-2.

The United States suffered another reversal when its doubles team of Olmedo and MacKay lost to a lightly regarded South African tandem, Gordon Forbes and Abe Segal, 6-4, 10-8, 2-6, 1-6, 6-1.

Three Australian Davis Cup members — Neale Fraser, Roy Emerson and Rod Laver — also advanced to the quarter-finals along with Luis Ayala of Chile and Bobby Wilson of Britain.

Surprise elimination of Miss Truman and Mrs. Fleitz threw the women's division into a wide open scramble, with two representatives left to guard the title Uncle Sam has not lost since 1937.

They are Darlene Hard, from Montebello, Calif., and Sally Moore, a 19-year-old from Bakersfield, Calif.

Miss Hard trounced Rita Bentley of Britain 6-2, 6-4. Miss Moore won a hard-fought match from a teammate, Janet Hopps of Seattle, Wash., 7-5, 2-6, 6-4.

Hank Aaron Sets New Precedent For All-Star Tilt

NEW YORK (AP) — Hank Aaron, Milwaukee's slugging outfielder, set a baseball precedent Saturday when he became the first player ever to be chosen unanimously for the major league All Star game.

Commissioner Ford Frick made the announcement in releasing the opening lineups—as picked by the players themselves—for the attraction at Forbes Field in Pittsburgh July 7.

The same teams, with the addition of three players to each, will also meet in the second 1959 All-Star game Monday, Aug. 3, at Los Angeles.

Aaron, receiving a maximum 208 votes, was one of three members of the champion Braves named for the National League team. The others were third baseman Ed Mathews and catcher Del Crandall.

By contrast, the world champion New York Yankees, who have dominated teams in the past, placed only one man on the American League team. He is Bill Skowron, first baseman.

Even Mickey Mantle was shunted down to the second team as the Cleveland Indians and Chicago White Sox, who have been battling for first place, each put two men on the AL starting team.

In the early days of the All-Star game the players picked the teams. Later the job was turned over to the fans. When this was found impractical, the voting was returned to the players last year.

No pitchers were chosen. This will be left to the rival managers —Casey Stengel of the Yankees and Fred Haney of the Braves.

Aaron is one of three repeaters on the NL team. The others are outfielder Willie Mays of the San Francisco Giants and Ernie Banks, shortstop of the Chicago Cubs.

Orlando Cepeda, the Giants' 1958 Rookie of the Year in the National League, made the team for the first time at first base. Also named were Johnny Temple, Cincinnati second baseman, and Wally Moon, Los Angeles left fielder.

Repeaters in the American League were catcher Gus Triandos of Baltimore, second baseman Nellie Fox and shortstop Luis Aparicio, both of the Chicago White Sox, and the Yankees' Skowron. Rocky Colavito, Cleveland's spectacular long-ball hitter, edged Detroit's league-leading batsman, Harvey Kuenn, for the right field spot. Colavito is a newcomer to the All-Star team along with the third base selection, Harmon Killebrew of the Washington Senators.

Completing the team were center fielder Al Kaline of Detroit, who beat out Mantle; and left fielder Minnie Minoso of Cleveland.

Trainer George (Maje) Odom saddled his first winner on July 13, 1934 at the old Empire City track which is now Yonkers Raceway.

Friday Baseball

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Philadelphia Phillies, beaten on three hits at Los Angeles Thursday night, were shut out on three hits by Mike McCormick Friday night as the Giants rolled to an 8-0 victory.

That kept San Francisco within two games of Milwaukee and two percentage points ahead of Los Angeles.

Milwaukee breezed with an 11-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs. Los Angeles puffed past Pittsburgh, 6-5. Cincinnati beat St. Louis in their squabble over sixth place, 7-6 in 10 innings.

The Phillies, shut out on eight hits in three games at San Francisco this season, now have failed to score in 23 innings against McCormick (6-7). Friday night he gave up only singles—by Harry Anderson in the second, Dave Philley in the fourth and George Anderson in the fifth—and retired the last 13 in order. He walked none, struck out six.

Jackie Brandt hit a grand slam home run Friday night and Willie Mays hit a solo homer—only his second in a month. Jim Owens (4-6) lost it.

The Dodgers won five straight for the first time since leaving Brooklyn while matching home runs with the Pirates. Each had three. Charlie Neal's two-run blast in the seventh was the clincher. Duke Snider and John Roseboro hit the others for Los Angeles, while Harry Bright, Dick Stuart and Don Hoak homered for Pittsburgh. Johnny Podres (8-4) was the winner with relief help. Ron Kline (6-5) was the loser.

Warren Spahn (10-8) was backed by three-run innings by the Braves. He also hit his first home run of the season, the 22nd of his major league career—tops for NL pitchers. Wes Covington and Johnny Logan each had three hits and drove in five runs between them. John Buzhardt (4-3) was the loser.

The Cardinals chased Don Newcombe in a five-run eighth, but the Reds then scored four in their eighth for a tie and finally put it away on Johnny Temple's bases-loaded double against losing reliever Tom Cheney (0-1). Luis Arroyo (1-0) was the winner in relief after the Cards had smacked Newk and Brooks Lawrence for four home runs—two by Stan Musial, who was 3-for-4 and drove in three runs. Joe Cunningham and Ken Boyer rapped the other homers as the Cards again slipped to seventh.

The Baltimore Orioles climbed back into second place in the American League Friday night with a 12-7 and 4-1 sweep of a twi-night double-header at Detroit. That left 'em just one game behind Cleveland's first place Indians, who belted Boston 11-5. It also left the Tigers four games behind in fifth.

New York's defending champion Yankees, crunching along on their avenging adventure, whipped Chicago 8-4 and gained a third place tie with the White Sox, two games shy of first. The champs haven't been this high since April 24.

Washington's homer-happy Senators belted four, with Harmon Killebrew getting his 25th, in an 8-4 victory at Kansas City that sprung the Nats out of the cellar and dumped the A's into last place.

Bob Nieman had four hits, one a homer, and drove in five runs in the first game for the Orioles, who cashed four Tiger errors for several unearned runs that beat Ray Narleski (4-8). Billy O'Dell (4-6) was the winner, although chased in a seven-run ninth. Al Kaline, Gus Zernial and Charlie Maxwell homered for the Tigers, who have lost seven of their last 10. Zernial's shot was his 10th pinch hit homer, tying Pittsburgh's Smoky Burgess for the major league career record.

Singles by Gus Triandos and Billy Gardner, Walt Dropo's double and a force out scored two runs in the nightcap second for the Birds as they picked up their seventh victory in the last 10 games. Jerry Walker (5-3) was the winner with Billy Loes' two shutout innings of relief. Frank Lary (8-4) lost it.

The Yankees, winning 21 of their last 30 and fourth in a row from the White Sox, smacked Billy Pierce (8-8) for home runs by Hector Lopez and Gil McDougald while building a 6-2 lead. Art Ditmar (6-5) won it with relief help from first Ralph Terry and then Ryne Duren, who fanned eight in the last three innings while extending his shutout string to 25 frames.

Duren, hit by a pitch in the ninth, got into a finger-pointing hassle with Chicago reliever Rodolfo Arias and then hit Nellie Fox in the ninth while striking out the side. But there was no real flare up.

It was different at Cleveland. The Injuns' Vic Power was hit by Billy Monbouquette following Woody Held's two-run homer in the third inning and was wrestled to a stop on his trudge to the mound by Boston catcher Pete Daley. Power was ejected before any swings were recorded.

Dick Brown also hit a two-run homer for Cleveland as Cal McLish (8-3) won his third in a row despite a grand slam by Jackie Jensen and a solo homer by Dick Gernert. Jerry Casale (6-5) who had won five in a row, left with the loss in a five-run Cleveland first.

Faye Throneberry (5), rookie Bob Allison (20) and Bob Lemon (18) also homered for the Senators, who skipped into sixth place. Camilo Pascual (6-7) won it with relief help after blanking the A's for six. Ned Garver (6-6) was the loser.

Phillies Halt Losing Streak, Beat Giants, 7-4

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The last-place Philadelphia Phillies snapped a six game losing streak Saturday, dumping San Francisco 7-4. The triumph was the National League cellar dwellers' first in 10 games on the West Coast this season.

Consecutive homers by Dave Philley and Harry Anderson in the seventh inning off loser Sam Jones carried the Phils to their sixth victory in the last 21 games.

Gene Conley, 6-foot-8 right-hander, held the second-place Giants to six hits in picking up his fifth victory in nine decisions. The Phils belted four San Francisco pitchers for 13 hits.

Conley struck out five, including Willie Kirkland three times. Jones, who pitched only the seventh inning, evened his record at 8-8 by yielding the two homers. Philley's was his fourth of the year; Anderson's his ninth.

Chicago Livestock Market Report

CHICAGO (AP)—A weak whole sale pork market and the largest offerings in a month knocked the butcher hog market down 50 cents to $1 this week while sow prices slipped 50 to 75 cents a hundred weight.

The supply of 44,000 head for the week was an increase of 7,000 from a week ago and the market barely maintained a $17 top on some days. Prices ranging downward from that peak on Tuesday cut the average cost of all barrows and gilts to $16.85, the lowest since early in March.

Offerings of No. 1 and 2 grade hogs under 220 lbs were scarce and shippers were forced to do considerable sorting at times to meet their requirements.

Hot weather was blamed for the decline of as much as $6 a hundredweight in loin prices at wholesale.

In the cattle market, slaughter steers were steady to 50 cents lower than a week ago, due mainly to an increase of 12 per cent in the supply which climbed to 44,000 head, compared with 40,000 during the previous week.

Although the offerings were fully 75 per cent slaughter steers they included a seasonally scarce supply of prime grade. With trade slow, several hundred head of good and choice grade steers were unsold Friday and carried over for Monday's market.

A midweek setback in the sheep market left spring slaughter lambs steady to 50 cents lower for the week. Although the supply was about 20 per cent smaller than for the previous week, it was almost 85 per cent spring lambs of good and choice grades.

CHICAGO (AP)—(USDA)— Here is a summary for the week of the cattle, hog and sheep markets with estimated receipts for Saturday:

Hogs 100; for the week: Barrows and gilts 50-1.00 lower, sows 50-75 lower. At the close prices stopped at 17.00 for the fourth consecutive day with a few select No 1 200 lb weights bringing that price. Several hundred head No 1 and 2 and No 1 190-220 lbs closed at 16.65-16.85 with mixed No 1 to 3 these weights 16.35-16.65 and mixed grade No 2 and 3 190-230 lbs 16.00-16.35. New York Stock Market

By ED MORSE
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market broke out of the doldrums this week, evoking comment that a summer rally is in the making.

It was the market's first advance in four weeks and it was fairly substantial.

While there's nothing to guarantee a summer rally, the records show that industrial shares since 1897 have posted gains in all but seven years from June through August.

Hopes that the tradition would be maintained this year were supported by the fact that there were three straight days in which trading topped three million shares and prices were rising, except for a spate of late profit taking in the final session.

Another piece of evidence was an upturn in the badly battered but highly important oil section.

Taken as a whole, the performance was a clear reversal of the extreme hesitancy which ruled in the three previous weeks.

Turnover for the week rose to 14,772,430 shares from 13,125,302 the week before.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks rose $2.50 to $226.20. This was its best rise since the week ended May 16 when the average gained $3.70.

Advances by aluminums highlighted the first two sessions when prices were irregular overall and trading was comparatively slow. Expectations of greater use of aluminum by the automobile industry were highlighted by Chrysler's joint venture with Aluminium Ltd.

Late in the mixed Tuesday session, however, a few specially-situated issues made big gains and this seemed to whet the appetites of traders and investors. They left the sidelines the following day and the rally was on.

The Wednesday market was vigorous from the start. Not only the fast-stepping "specialties" but steels, motors and rails joined in a brisk rally as volume reached three million shares and more for the first of three such sessions.

Motors and rails served as pacemakers on Thursday when the rally continued. Higher prices continued for most of Friday until precautionary pre-weekend selling marred the advance and left prices mixed at the close.

As the strike deadline neared in the steel negotiations, this was enough to breed some caution. The big Wall Street house of E.F. Hutton & Co., however, looked favorably on steel shares and commented: "It will be recalled that the steels went on to score new highs consistently right through the six-week strike in the summer of 1956."

U.S. Government bonds drifted lower this week but the corporate market posted its first advance in three months.

It was a relapse for governments after two weeks narrowly on the upside. But the pressure was light in a very thin market.

The Treasury moved very cautiously so as not to disturb the market in announcing its five-billion-dollar cash financing for July. As expected, the issues were short term: three billion dollars of 258-day tax anticipation bills and two billion of one-year treasury bills.

The Treasury decided to let the market determine the interest rate by offering them at competitive bidding rather than setting it in Washington.

The corporate advance this week came on moderately active demand. Industrials led the rise, followed by investment quality issues and utilities. Foreign dollar bonds were steady. Only rails declined.

Trading for the period rose to $26,432,600 par value on the New York Stock Exchange from $26,205,000 the previous week and $25,149,000 for the corresponding week a year ago.

BROAD PRICE SWING LEFT FEW GAINS, MODERATE LOSSES

By GIL MAYO

CHICAGO (AP) — The broad price swings in the grain futures market this week were mostly self-cancelling but they left a few small gains and moderate losses.

The steepest setbacks were in rye where they ranged out to three cents a bushel. Corn sagged as much as a cent while wheat and oats advanced fractions and soybeans finished in a mixed range.

On the whole, the market was the kind dealers describe as a trading affair—one in which guiding influences are not altogether decisive because of varying interpretations.

These included weather and crop conditions which always are considerable factors during the growing season. Prices often react to these reports, usually based on limited spot surveys, and to government reports related to the market through grain stocks in loan or sold.

One such significant influence this week involved day-to-day reports of sales by the Commodity Credit Corp. of loan-defaulted supplies of soybeans on Midwestern markets.

But while CCC boosted its total of soybean sales since June 1 to almost 16 million bushels, the government also provided an offsetting bullish consideration in its report that soybean crushings during May were the largest since January and that processor inventories during the month declined rather sharply.

Wheat closed the week unchanged to ⅜ cent a bushel higher on the 1959 crop contracts, July $1.86¼-½, and the 1960 crop months ¾ cent higher, corn ⅜-1¼ lower, July $1.25⅞-26; oats ¼-⅝ higher, July new type contrat 6⅜; rye 1½-3 cents lower, July $1.23¼-¼; soybeans 1⅛ higher on July ¾ lower on new crop contracts, July $2.24⅜-½.

tion Service stands ready to help solve the steel dispute if so requested.

"I suggest to both parties in this dispute," Eisenhower wrote McDonald, "that they continue to bargain without interruption of production until all the terms and conditions of a new contract are agreed upon."

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell, in Washington, read the President's letter to McDonald here in New York, over long distance telephone. The union chief said he agreed a strike should be avoided, and that, accordingly, steel contracts were being extended two weeks.

Earlier, the steel industry had turned down a two-week extension proposal from the union because the union wanted retroactive assurance of negotiated benefits.

The steel labor situation had been fouled up for several days in argument of how to proceed. McDonald said further talks with the industry team seemed futile and proposed direct bargaining with the heads of the nation's top dozen steel firms.

The executives gave a flat rejection, saying the industry bargaining team headed by Cooper had their full confidence and support. McDonald then said he would resume bargaining with the Cooper group provided it was ready to discuss contract gains. Cooper replied he was promising nothing.

Break Ground At Argonne For Atom Smasher

CHICAGO (AP)—Some 80 educators and scientists Saturday participated in ground breaking ceremonies for Argonne National Laboratory's giant synchrotron which will smash more atoms into smaller particles than ever before.

The new installation, to cost 29 million dollars, will be partly covered by a hill of earth. Its central feature is to be a hollow ring-shaped magnet 200 feet in diameter.

Protons will be accelerated to an energy of 12½ billion volts in a vacuum enclosed by the magnet, then shot into bombardment chambers.

Dr. Roger H. Hildebrand, associate director of Argonne, said the machine, called a zero gradient synchrotron, "will open vast new frontiers in the study of sub-atomic particles." He said it will produce sub-atomic particles in greater volume than any of the presently operating synchrotrons.

"New laws of nature are awaiting discovery in these particles," Hildebrand said. "Laws that govern every cell in our bodies and every star overhead."

State Legislature

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—The 71st General Assembly's mountainous work load may force it to break an eight-year precedent by passing bills after midnight Tuesday well into Wednesday July 1.

Midnight of the last June day is accepted as the end of the regular session because the constitution states that bills cannot become law by a normal majority vote until July 1 following.

Bills Await Action

A record number of bills await consideration during the two final working days—more than 700 in the Senate, about 600 in the House. These remain out of nearly 2,700 introduced this session—a record in itself.

The gigantic task these 1,300 pending bills pose for lawmakers in these two last days can be appreciated by the fact that in the whole six months of the 1951 session, lawmakers handled only 1,665 bills. That was the last session to work past midnight June 30.

Quitting Time

Since 1951, lawmakers have exited well ahead of the deadline. In fact, the 1953 session headed for home June 27, the earliest final adjournment in 24 years.

By stopping the clock Tuesday lawmakers may continue to approve bills requiring only a constitutional majority—89 votes in the House, 30 in the Senate. If the session went officially into July, any bill would require a two-thirds vote to take effect immediately.

Cause Of Bottleneck

What caused the bottleneck this year? For one thing, the hassel over taxes—whether to adopt Gov. Stratton's recommendation for boosting and broadening the sales tax and hiking liquor taxes, or to act on the Democratic program which hinged on higher corporation levies.

Most of the problem has been resolved, with acceptance of the half cent sales tax increase last week and the earlier decision of both houses to reject the broadening proposals.

Liquor Tax

But the proposed 50 per cent increase in liquor, wine and beer taxes still has a tough round ahead in the House, which may block advancement.

Moreover, a number of controversial issues have been deferred for months in hopes of picking up votes during the final week.

Fair Employment Practices legislation has advanced shakily to passage stage in the Senate, which could—but probably won't—send it to the governor. Southern Illinois University's authority to grand engineering degrees also is on passage stage, where it has remained for months.

J P System

The Senate must decide whether to give final assent to revamping the justice of the peace system, to freeze personal property tax multipliers at their present average level, 55 per cent, and whether to subsidize the Chicago Transit Authority to some extent.

A conflict between House and Senate over the school aid foundation level is expected to reach a conference committee of the two houses during the closing days. The committee will have to resolve the difference between the House's recommendation for a $262 figure and the Senate's agreement with Stratton's $250 level.

Key Recommendation

A key Stratton recommendation—for reorganizing the code, or executive departments—has been sent to the House, where even Senate promoters expect it to founder.

Senate concurrence is needed in order to place a 170 million dollar bond issue for educational building purposes before the voters in November, 1960. The House added 50 million dollars to the proposal for construction at a University of Illinois campus in Chicago. However, if the bonds are approved, the next General Assembly would decide how the money would be divided.

Soviet Protests Holding Election In West Berlin

BONN, Germany (AP) — The Soviet Union made a strong protest Saturday against the election of a new West German president in the isolated city of Berlin.

In notes delivered to West Germany and the Big Three Western Allies the Soviets said it would be a provocation to elect the president of the West German Federal Republic in Berlin.

West Germany's Electoral College is to meet in Berlin Wednesday to choose a successor to President Theodor Heuss, whose second five-year term expires in September.

A British spokesman said the Soviet notes were strongly worded but did not contain any hint of Red reprisals.

A Communist East German spokesman has mentioned the possibility of a temporary blockade, but recently that line has been dropped.

The West Germans declared they had no intention of changing their plans because of the Moscow protest.

The president has a second official residence in Berlin. The Bonn Parliament holds sessions in Berlin from time to time to reinforce the constitutional clause designating the city as the German capital and Bonn as the provisional seat of government.

Report Revolt In Santa Cruz Under Control

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP)—The government said Saturday its troops control the city of Santa Cruz in eastern Bolivia after putting down a subversive movement.

"Armed bands which had plunged Santa Cruz into a state of anxiety retired during the night," said a communique from the office of President Hernan Siles Zuazo.

Gen. Hamon Vargas Tapia was placed in temporary control of the city.

An Interior Ministry communique accused an "oligarchy" of inspiring the trouble at Santa Cruz. Oligarchy is the name the government usually applies to wealthy Bolivians whose tin mines were nationalized.

The ministry said armed youths had attacked police headquarters in Santa Cruz Friday, killing a policeman and wounding four others. When news of the attack reached this capital, the government ordered troops flown to Santa Cruz along with the chiefs of the army, air force, and national police.

Despite reports that the city now is under control of government troops, reports persisted in La Paz that more soldiers would be airlifted to Santa Cruz.

Runaway Heiress Gives Notice She Intends To Wed

CREETOWN, Scotland (AP) — Runaway heiress Katherine Dowsett and her socialite sweetheart came out of hiding for 10 minutes Saturday—just long enough to give notice they intend to marry.

Then Katherine, 20, and Edward Langley, 27, disappeared again into the forests of southern Scotland.

Katherine fled from her home in England a month ago after her millionaire father, Harry Dowsett tried to break up her romance. He won an order making her a ward of the High Court. The court ruled that she must live at home and keep away from Langley, a London antique dealer.

Sunday morning, Katherine and Edward arrived by car at the register office in Creetown, a village of 800. They told the registrar they wanted to marry and he posted the banns in his office, as the law requires.

In eight days they will be free to marry. Under Scottish law, minors can marry without parental consent. In England, consent is needed under the age of 21.

Newsman 'Glances Over His Shoulder' At 40-Year Route

Interesting People, Events Recalled From Memory By Veteran Journal Courier Writer

By BIRCH B. RIDGWAY

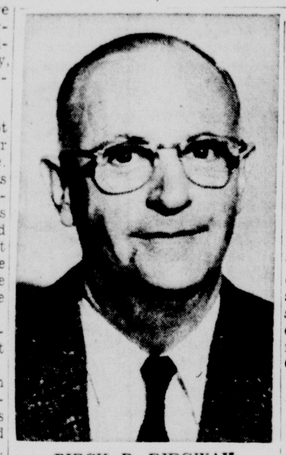
A newspaper received regularly in this office for several years had a column called: "IT INTERESTED ME—IT MAY INTEREST YOU."

That caption fits the purpose of this series of four articles—a combination of memories of people and events—a running glimpse of 40 years of newspaper reporting in Jacksonville.

Somewhere along the route since July 2, 1919, reference may be made to events or individuals which will stir the recollection of some. To others it may be brand new reading material.

One of the aims of this glance back over our shoulder is to recall by a chain of incidents how Jacksonville lived quietly in the Twenties; fought for survival through the historic depression lasting into the Thirties; and rallied its man and woman-power to meet the sacrifices and privations of the wartime Forties.

Along the 40 year route have been associations with many interesting personalities, their friendships helping to brighten the way, whose activities made good newspaper "copy."



BIRCH B. RIDGWAY

"Hard Roads" On The Way

The summer of 1919 was not particularly prolific in newspaper stories on the Jacksonville scene. There were no paved highways stretching in all directions to invite lethal speed. The highways were on their way—a determined band of "hard road" boosters kept Jacksonville's appeal before state officials at Springfield—but the highways hadn't yet reached the city.

Back in those days an automobile collision usually meant bent fenders and injuries.

The first automobile collision we covered happened at the junction of Vandalia Road and Woods Lane. Several persons were cut and bruised. There were no fatalities.

Street cars moved leisurely and noisily around the public square. You could ride them for a nickel—anywhere in town.

Horse drawn vehicles didn't attract any particular attention in the business district, although cars and trucks were beginning to crowd them out. A small section of the "hitching rack" remained along the curb of Central Park, a reminder of the time when the heavy iron chain extended entirely around the park. Transfer wagons still congregated on the north side of the square.

When "The Boss" Was Always In

Names on signs over stores and on the windows usually meant that the proprietor was on duty inside. J. Herman was busily engaged in dispensing women's millinery in the establishment bearing his name on the east side of the square. Frank J. Waddell was attentive to the needs of his department store customers. William Floreth, on the west side of the square, responded when anyone inquired for the proprietor.

It was that way in all but two or three business establishments—the owner was present in person. When you called for the boss, you got him!

This was only a year or two before a definite change set in. "Chain" stores owned by corporations appeared on the commercial scene. Within a few years it was no longer possible at many places to find the owner in direct charge. Home-owned establishments became inter-mingled with those controlled by corporations, forming a big, lusty business district. An expanded trade area was the result.

As Jacksonville moved nearer the Twenties the local news front was quiet, except for a few special happenings, which captured attention of citizens. The Reddish murder trial was one of these.

A Big Story Comes To Town

In the late fall of 1919 the case of Dr. Horace Reddish, St. Louis physician, was brought to Morgan county from Jersey county on a change of venue. The physician was charged with slaying his aged father, Stephen Reddish, and the family maid at the residence in Jerseyville.

This writer found himself in fast company of a corps of visiting reporters, including St. Louis talent, while covering the ten day trial. With four attorneys on each side, the case was fought bitterly.

During the long trial, in which reams of evidence were introduced, Dr. Reddish refused to be photographed. At the conclusion of the trial he notified the Jacksonville newspapers that he and his wife would pose for a picture, which they did.

The physician said his decision was reached because the Jacksonville newspapers had covered the trial with fairness. He thought he got a fair shake from The Journal and Courier, as well as from the jury.

It was satisfying that a man who had been on trial for his life should form this opinion of the Jacksonville press, after reading coverage of the trial in newspapers published in several other cities.

"Happy Birthday To All"

Jacksonville contracted centennial fever in the early Twenties. A hundredth birthday was coming up in 1925. Citizens delegated their best leadership to the task of formulating plans — elaborate in every respect.

The most ambitious Centennial project was construction of a Greek Bowl in the west section of the city, on the site now occupied by Veterans Park. The natural slope was scooped out, forming an outdoor arena with vast rows of concrete seats.

A stage that would compare with the St. Louis Muny opera afforded ample space for hundreds of performers, oxen, horses, and equipment, in a historical pageant that was presented several nights in episodes.

Jacksonville's founding and subsequent chapters of development were told in song and story, with dozens of groups participating.

History Works Overtime

On the opening night the huge audience sat entranced as characters of early days occupied the stage, and musical organizations combined talents in an outstanding program.

Eleven o'clock arrived, then midnight. Despite the lateness of the hour, the show went on. At 12:40 a.m. the last episode "of the evening" was finished up, and the crowd went home.

Profiting from experience of the first gala night, the pageant staff saw to it that the program moved along faster on following nights. But midnight was the average quitting time as a happy, appreciative audience viewed the spectacle of how a crude little prairie village grew into a thriving city of homes, religious and educational institutions, hospitals, commerce and industries.

Parade An Inspiring Sight

The Centennial parade was an inspiring sight in which thousands participated, with thousands more jammed along the line of march. We clocked it as requiring two hours to pass a given point, but by the time the two hours elapsed the parade was at a standstill—floats, automobiles, horses, marchers, gloriously scrambled in a historic celebration.

William Jennings Bryan returned to the scenes of his college days to address the throng from a reviewing stand on West State street near the court house. His eloquent, magnificent oratory reached only a portion of the great Centennial gathering.

Jacksonville has witnessed many special public events and great crowds, both before and since its hundredth birthday. Old newspaper files describe the triumphant welcome of Admiral George Dewey, hero of Manila Bay in the Spanish-American war, as a day to be remembered, when Jacksonville was bursting at its seams with visitors. No doubt Dewey Day was a masterpiece of its time in civic celebrations.

The Centennial parade and accompanying program will go down in history as another momentous occasion, inspired by people who expressed love and devotion of their city in a glamorous birthday celebration.

Greene Man Admits Beating Young Son

A twenty-year-old Greene County resident told authorities Saturday that he severely beat his young son on the evening of April 6; the child, one-year-old Richard Eugene Wood, was found dead at his home the next morning.

In a statement released Saturday evening by Assistant Greene County State's Attorney L. A. Mehrhoff, "The defendant, Richard Leroy Wood, admitted he severely beat the child the evening of April 6th, 1959, about 9:30 p.m." and later "gave up working on it trying to revive it about 12:30 and put it to bed."

Shirley Wood, wife of the defendant, was examined during pretest interviews with Richard Wood when he made the preceding admission. The defendant will be taken into court for further proceedings Tuesday.

Laboratory and pathologists reports are presently being made by the state crime lab in Springfield. Futher investigation into the untimely death of the small child will be made after evaluation of the reports.

The child's badly decomposed body was found in a shallow grave in a wooded area 16 miles east of Carrollton after an investigation spurred by a neighbor's curiosity to know "what happened to their little boy." Both parents denied anything unusual about the disappearance of the boy at first, but later admitted the strange circumstances surrounding his death and burial.

Wood had previously told authorities he "whipped the child and put it to bed," then retired for the night. He then said he awoke about 3 o'clock in the morning to "cover the child," and "it seemed OK at that time."

"When we awoke in the morning the child was dead, so we just buried it."

Lay New Roofing On Court House; Plan Other Work

County Commissioners Hobert Rigg and Paul Johnson climbed to the roof of the Morgan county court house Saturday morning to inspect the newly-laid asphalt roofing on the flat portion of the building.

The new roofing was laid by Charles Ryan, contractor, at a cost of $1,685. During past months the roof had been leaking badly after each rain, with water seeping into the second floor, especially in the circuit court court room.

The ceiling of the court room shows effects of this moisture, paint having peeled off in large strings.

"We couldn't plan redecoration of the circuit court room until the roof was repaired," Chairman Rigg stated. "The board probably will receive bids in September or October for redecorating the circuit court room."

Rigg said the board is considering a plan to drop the ceiling of the big room, which has always been one of the highest in any public building here. Lowering the ceiling would be more practical from a standpoint of painting and also from heating, the commissioners believe.

Crash At Diamond And Morton Injures Nebraska Tourists

A Lincoln, Nebr., couple was injured and a Jacksonville man escaped unhurt in an automobile collision at 10:51 o'clock Saturday morning at South Diamond street and Morton avenue—which is rapidly becoming Jacksonville's most dangerous intersection.

Conrad Maul, 50, and his wife, Gertrude, of 4016 Baldwin, Lincoln, Nebr., were injured as they traveled eastward on Morton avenue, expecting to take a vacation trip to Maryland.

Robert D. Ruble, 29, of 862 West Superior avenue, who was traveling south on Diamond street, was not injured. Police who compiled a report of the accident said Ruble stopped and waited for the green light.

The editorial on page two of the second section of today's Journal Courier was written before this accident occurred Saturday morning.

The accident adds an unfortunate and needless exclamation point to our editorial.

How many more will have to happen before something is done?

The Nebraska man, according to the police report, told officers he saw the other car sitting at the intersection, but that he did not notice the traffic light until too late to avoid Ruble's car, which moved ahead when the green light came on.

Cooney's ambulance took Mr. and Mrs. Maul to Passavant hospital, where they were given emergency treatment and admitted for further care and examination.

Mr. Maul had cuts on his face and his chest was bruised. His wife sustained gashes on her upper lip and forehead, requiring stitches.

Mr. Maul's 1958 Oldsmobile, with damage to the right side, was towed to DeWitt Motors. Mr. Ruble's 1954 Chevrolet, damaged on the front end, was towed to the John Ellis Chevrolet garage.

Chief of Police Charles Runkel and Sgt. Wilbur Stafford went to the place of the accident and rendered assistance.

Although protected by automatic traffic signals, the Diamond and Morton intersection on U.S. Routes 36-54 four-laned highway has been the scene of a series of wrecks in recent months.

PROSPECTS FOR WHEAT PRICES

Wheat harvest in Illinois is about ready to start. Whether to seek storage space and hold or to sell is a pressing question at this time.

As of June 1, the USDA estimated winter wheat production at 941 million bushels and total wheat production at 1,181 million bushels. Last year the winter wheat crop was 1,180 million bushels, and the spring wheat crop was 282 million, for a total of 1,462 million. Lest anyone be encouraged by the decrease from last year, this total is still more than 100 million bushels above the 1948-57 average. The 1948-57 period included five years of severe drouth in the principal wheat-producing areas.

As a further footnote, as of June 1, 1958, the 1958 crop was estimated at 1,270 million bushels, some 192 million below the final estimate.

Wheat production far exceeds wheat requirements at a price above that of feed grains. We currently consume about 485 million bushels of wheat for flour and domestic use. It takes about 100 million bushels for feed and seed. Commercial exports for dollars, heavily subsidized to make our wheat competitive with that of other exporters, amount to about 175 million bushels. About 250 million bushels a year are currently under the various gifts, barter and foreign currency schemes of the USDA.

Adding these several things together gives a total of 760 million bushels of wheat in real markets and 1,010 million as the absolute maximum that can be disposed of. At this time it appears that the carryover will again increase.

East of the Mississippi River the situation is a little more favorable than it was last year. Production in Illinois is currently at 50 million bushels compared with 54 million last year. Total production for Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan is currently estimated at 158 million compared with 183 million last year.

This decrease should put the price of wheat a little higher next spring than it was last spring.

Because of the excessive production, the harvest price will depend on the loan. Wheat will be priced at a sufficient discount below the loan to encourage farmers to store rather than sell.

On the basis of historical average discounts, the July futures price at Chicago will fall to $1.80 a bushel before the cash price is low enough to encourage a heavy movement into loan. It may be that farmers will not now accept such large discounts as formerly and that the price therefore will not go so low. On the other hand, it may be that last year's rather bad experience in storing will encourage farmers to take greater than usual discounts.

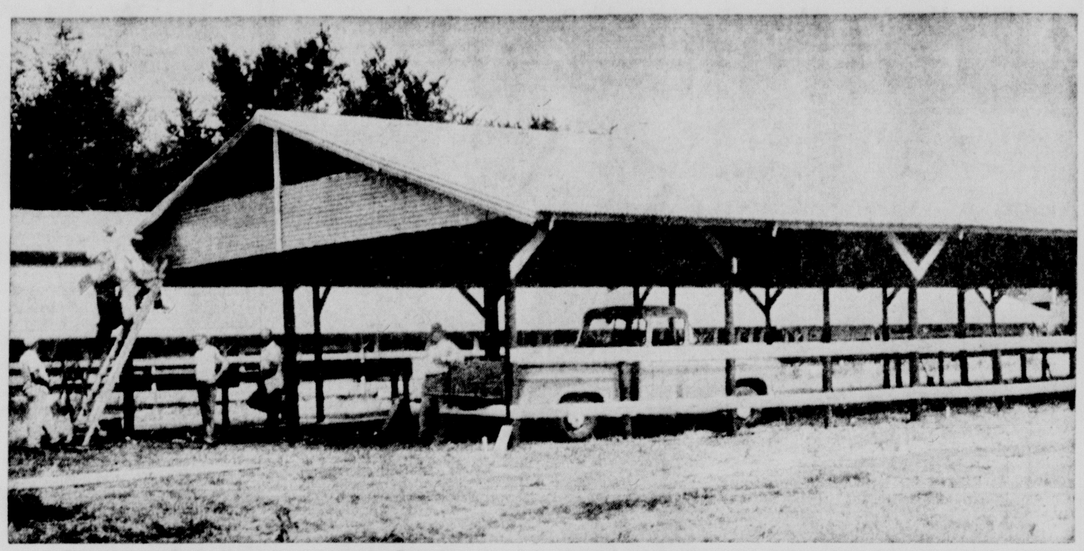
VOLUNTEERS COMPLETE HOG BARN AT FAIRGROUNDS



Chairman of the hog barn project Bob Houston reported a total of thirty volunteers reported for work at the Morgan County fairgrounds during the past week to put the finishing touches on the roof of this hog barn. The roof is metal and should withstand most wind and rain storms for many years.

All 4-H members feeling a touch of "fair fever" should get welcome relief within the next week or so —Glenn Spencer, fair secretary, reports that the 1959 Morgan County Fair Catalog is about to come off the presses and will be distributed pronto. Those on the mailing list include last year's exhibitors, special requests and advertisers. In addition, 4-H clubs will handle distribution.

Carole Bigham, employed at the Maple Crest Sanitorium in Jacksonville, has been at her home here the past few days returning to her work on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wilkinson and her father, Charles Cowper, visited Saturday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Irl Bowman.

Rabbits Eat Soybean Plants In Jersey County

JERSEYVILLE—Rabbits are so numerous on some farms in the Jerseyville vicinity as to constitute a pest, and soybean crops are being nibbled by the bunnies to such an extent as to create some real damage.

Hawks and foxes are among the control factors set up by nature to curb the growth of the rabbit population, and already foxes are being reported in the near vicinity of Jerseyville where the food supply of rabbits is plentiful.

Deputy Sheriff Melvin Leach reported that he saw an entire litter of young foxes along the roadside near the eastern city limits one evening this week.

"There were three young foxes in the litter," Leach stated, "and they didn't show very much fear of me as I drove along the highway."

90 Percent Complete

The harvesting of wheat in Jersey county was estimated as 90 per cent complete as of noon Wednesday.

The early varieties were harvested during the past week, leaving only the later varieties to be combined during the current week. A survey indicates that among the best producing varieties this week were acreages planted in Knox which developed early and was ready to harvest in many fields as early at 11 days ago.

Some acreages of Knox averaged up to 40 bushels to the acre this season.

Mrs. Wm. Stone Hardin Home Bureau Hostess

HARDIN—Mrs. William Stone was hostess to the Hardin Home Bureau unit at her home in Hardin Tuesday night. Mrs. Paul Aderton was assistant hostess. This was the last meeting of the group until September.

Business discussed included the making of apple butter for the Calhoun Apple Festival, and the sending of a delegate to a vice-chairman's conference at Pere Marquette Park, in September.

The major lesson, "Ways to Cut Your Grocery Bill," was given by Mrs. Frank McDonald, unit chairman, and Mrs. Loyal Linthicum presented the minor lesson, "Making Your Own Ice Cream," during which lesson, samples were served to the guests.

Miss Mary Ellen Ducey returned Tuesday from a one week session at Girls State on the campus of MacMurray College in Jacksonville. Miss Ducey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Ducey, and a senior at Unit 40 High School in the fall, was sponsored by Unit 636, American Legion Auxiliary in Hardin.

Miss Ducey was one of 498 girls attending the session, where girls from all parts of the state are taught about election procedure and various other phases of local and state government, by going through the process. Miss Ducey was a candidate for state representative and was a delegate to the state convention. The group visited historic spots in Springfield Monday.

ADKINS 4-H CLUB DISPLAYS SEWING, COOKING PROJECTS

WHITE HALL—Mrs. B. L. Adkins' group of 4-H girls met Friday night at the home of Mrs. J. J. Chumley, and the members were hosts to their mothers. Karin Howard and Cathy Blake were hosts and served punch and cookies made as their project; cookies of the other members were shown.

OLD SANDY MAY HAVE GONE TO BED WITH SNAKE

JERSEYVILLE—Old Sandy is dead. For almost 11 years the large Red Bone coon hound belonging to George Kirchner of the Richwood Township vicinity had been the leader in thousands of hunts in the woodland areas of Western Jersey county.

George Kirchner, owner of Old Sandy, was in Jerseyville Wednesday morning and reported the death of his favorite dog. "He must have gone to bed with a copperhead snake," Kirchner reported. "He swelled up something terrible and just died from the effects of it."

Several years ago Kirchner turned down an offer of $250 for Old Sandy.

Kirchner reported that he killed a large copperhead several days ago. "I was coming out of the peach orchard and saw the snake. I went for a sassafras club that I keep handy, but by the time I got back, the snake had disappeared. I began parting the clover in the locality where I first saw the copperhead. Pretty soon I found him curled up alongside a small tree. I thrust the stick at him and he struck. I just knocked his head off then."

Kirchner reported that copperheads have been more numerous than usual in the locality where he farms. "I sprayed my peach orchard seven times this season," he stated, "and I wore a high eight buckle overshoe for protection just in case I might run into a snake and not see it in time."

Does Anyone Really Care?

We are beginning to wonder if people really care about the highway hazards which exist in the Jacksonville vicinity on heavily traveled U.S. Highway 36-54.

We have called attention editorially to these perils but no action has been taken to eliminate the booby traps.

Our city and county officials have been wholly silent. Not a single one of them has called for corrective action. The problem, of course, is one which calls for positive steps from the State Highway Department, but it would appear that those in charge of that department are oblivious to the desperateness of the situation. They need some firm prodding in the interest of public safety.

Within the past week another accident took place at the intersection of West Morton and South Diamond. The stop lights there, for some reason or another, do not seem visible enough to traffic on 36-54, particularly westbound.

The situation is still terribly perilous west of the city where the old Mound road joins the highway. A motorist coming from the west takes his life in his hands if he attempts to turn off to enter Jacksonville. This junction is especially hazardous at night when it is difficult to see the old road. Adequate lighting at this intersection would be a definite improvement. What is needed, of course, is a properly constructed turnoff, like that at Winchester, to channelize traffic.

Again we ask, how many more needless accidents will it take before these hazards to life and limb are eliminated?

A New Look At Planning

One of the terms Americans may have to learn to take a new look at is "planning."

Its heavy use by Communists and Socialists gave it a bad name in this country, especially in the depression 1930s, when everybody had a plan for getting us out of the mud. Conservative politicians found it easy to suggest radicalism among their opponents by labeling them "planners."

There was some assault, too, from another viewpoint. Tough, practical men concerned day-to-day with making city and nation a workable place often dismissed "planners" as visionaries whose ideas for tomorrow were utterly without value.

Of course we have always had some wild dreamers in our midst. But on the other hand, we have always had the planning, too. And even those who have assailed the "planners" have wanted planning—of a sort. The only question was what sort.

In the field of city, state and national planning, a feeling has existed that any plans which are sweeping and long range are automatically visionary and impractical. Robert Moses of New York, a dedicated and widely respected public servant specializing in park and highway planning, more than once fired shots at the long range planners.

"They should stay away from New York," he said, "It's too tough for 'em."

But the physical mess most sizable American cities are in today, including New York most emphatically, suggests that the longer view might have been useful. The short range plans have been translated into incredible congestion and confusion.

The same might be said for our national plans affecting schools, highways, hospitals, airports, community facilities, and such aching problems as the farm production glut. The short view is getting to be synonymous with no view at all, what with population figures booming to unheard-of-heights.

If long range planning does not soon become respectable, the United States may one day find its public facilities and services and its grasp of great problems caught in a discouraging, near-hopeless tangle.

"I'm Not Your Maker But I Could Be Your Finisher!"

The World Today

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower's veto of the wheat and tobacco bills illustrates the dilemma of Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson, leader of the Senate Democrats.

Johnson and his fellow Texan, Speaker Sam Rayburn, leader of the House Democrats, were able to muster enough votes, but only a majority, to pass the two bills which they knew beforehand Eisenhower didn't like.

But to re-pass them over a presidential veto requires a two-thirds vote of both houses, far harder to get than a simple majority and in this situation practically impossible.

Therefore, Eisenhower's veto Thursday night just about means no new wheat or tobacco programs this year.

In both houses the Democrats have a huge majority over the Republicans: 64 to 34 in the Senate; 283 to 153 in the House. But in neither house do the Democrats have two-thirds of the membership.

For that, they'd need 66 senators, or two more than they have, and 290 House members, or seven more than they have. So even if Democrats voted solidly, and they seldom do, they'd still need Republican help to override a veto.

Thus Eisenhower, although his Republicans are badly outnumbered, has in his threat of a veto a mighty weapon to push the Democratic leadership into shaping legislation into a form acceptable to him.

This is an amazing situation, particularly in view of this fact:

In the past three elections—even in 1956 when Eisenhower himself was winning a second term — the voters trusted the Democrats more than the Republicans to do what they wanted by giving them control of Congress each time.

And Johnson, who describes himself as a "prudent progressive," has sought a middle ground and with this explanation:

That he has a responsibility for getting legislation through Congress and would rather see Congress achieve a record of legislation passed than create political issues or controversy by seeking legislation which may be vetoed.

The result: He has made a policy of shepherding through Congress fairly conservative legislation. This is: legislation which has a good chance of getting a majority vote and still falling within Eisenhower's requirements.

This Congress, like others before it, and despite liberals' claims that the overwhelming Democratic victory last November was a mandate for liberal legislation, is made up of three groups:

The reactionaries in both parties a fairly small gathering, on one end; a handful of liberals in both parties on the other end, and in the middle, by overwhelming number, the conservatives.

Johnson constantly plays to that big middle group. At any given time this middle-of-the-road approach will be too progressive for the reactionaries, too conservative for the liberals.

By standing on the middle ground Johnson is beginning to draw the fire of liberal groups and even non-congressional leaders in his own party: Members of the advisory council of the Democratic National Committee.

They have generally taken this position:

Johnson shouldn't let himself be pushed, by the specter of a presidential veto, into blessing legislation Eisenhower may approve. Instead, they contend, he should fight for far more extensive legislation.

Behind this reasoning is the argument that if the bolder legislation is killed by a Republican veto, the Democrats will have a better political issue in the 1960 elections.

But Johnson and Rayburn, because they are the Democratic leaders in Congress, can reply that they have built over the years a congressional record which must have pleased the voters since the Democrats have been given control of Congress in the past three elections despite Republican control of the administration.

Washington Takes Look at The Problems of Oldsters

BY MARIE DAERR

The good health, and the income to sustain it, of 15 million Americans over 65.

This, in the opinion of Sen. Pat McNamara, is America's top "aging" problem—a problem which the Democratic senator from Michigan calls one of "increasing national concern."

Health and income are just two of the topics that the country's top experts in the field of aging talked about this past week (June 16 through 18) in Washington, D.C., before the senator's Subcommittee on Problems of the Aged and Aging.

Their talks are evidence that older people and the crises that face them aren't forgotten by America's legislators. Serving with Sen. McNamara on the subcommittee are Senators John F. Kennedy, Joseph S. Clark, Jennings Randolph, Everett McKinley Dirksen and Barry Goldwater.

Besides health and money, other topics are jobs, housing and living arrangements.

Regarding health and the money a person needs to stay healthy Senator McNamara pointed out that older people need two to four times as much hospital service—and at a point in their lives where the income just won't cover the cost.

"Less than one-third of the aged have some form of hospital insurance," the senator said. "And each year hospital costs climb. They probably will continue to do so for an indefinite period of time.

"Besides good health and an adequate income, the older person needs respectable housing. He needs social services at particular times to help him live independently in his own home, if he desires, in his own community."

Most of the nation's older people still have low incomes. Prof. Wilbur J. Cohen of the University of Michigan testified at the hearings.

"In 1958, three-fifths of all people 65 and over had incomes of less than $1,000," Cohen said. "Another fifth had incomes between $1,000 and $2,000. The rest had incomes of more than $2,000."

The proportion of older people among the nation's workers is growing smaller, the University of Michigan expert added.

"Last December, only about one in every five persons 65 and over was working," Cohen reported. "This was three million out of a total of more than 15 million.

"Only one elderly family in four gets any income from employment. In 1890, seven out of 10 men aged 65 and over had jobs. By 1945, the proportion fell to one in two. Today it's about one in three.

A—Yes, you should be able to collect Social Security. However, you are wrong in thinking you paid on self-employing from 1950 to 1954. This provision of the law went into effect in 1951.

WEEKLY BIBLE COMMENT

Priests and Kings in the Bible

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

Lately I have been reading part of the Old Testament, especially the historical books, and records of the earlier times of the Jewish people after the coming of Abraham into Palestine.

It is well that attention has been so strongly concentrated upon the nobler and finer things: Abraham, courageous pioneer, and especially man of peace, willing to forego his own interest if peace could prevail; Joseph, perfect example of a man true to himself and to his God, alike in adversity, in temptation, in prison, and in power; Moses, renouncing the palace to share the lot of his people and lead them; Joshua, Caleb, heroic in faith and action; Samuel, child of love and prayer, priest and virtual king; David, heroic youth and sweet singer, despite his virtual murder of Uriah.

All that, and much more, is the Old Testament as most of us know it, and it is reinforced with all the richness and life-giving power of the New Testament.

But I wonder whether we have been right in taking so little account of the darkness of the background, and in virtually ignoring so much that is there.

There is the further question, also, of how wrong we have been in making so much that is in, near, and relating to that dark background the subject matter of Sunday School Lessons, that often for a long period have had little direct relation to the life and teaching of Jesus and the Bible as the book of salvation.

A milder aspect was a recent lesson centering on the life of Jehosophat, King of Judah. The Book of Chronicles records him as a good king and administrator, yet he was the ally of the wicked King Ahab, whom he joined in an unwarranted war against Syria, disrupting three years of peace. That story is told in I Kings 22.

King Ahab was mortally wounded by an arrow shot "at a venture," and Jehosophat saved himself only by flight. It is a profitable story for adults, but Jehosophat isn't quite a good subject lesson for children.

The proper use of the Bible calls for wise and discriminating judgment. Two things are to be said for the Bible in its historical parts. First, is the remarkable honesty and realism with which it tells the truth, not suppressing even the blackest facts and incidents, even when they bear heavily against Israel itself. And, second, is the way in which despite that dark background the supreme emphasis is upon goodness, greatness, and nobility.

The dark background of the Bible is the dark background of all strife and slaughter in all ages and in our own time. But what a contrast with the supreme greatness of the Bible message concerning the love of God and the brotherhood of man.

WAY TO TEST CHOPS

Best way to tell whether pork chops are cooked: make a small slit in the meat near the bone. The meat should look gray-white; if it looks pink, the chops need to cook some more.

Long Trail Is A-Winding To Postmaster Confirmation

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—United States Post office Department headquarters here maintains with a straight face that it has no records of political affiliations of the 931 local postmaster appointments now awaiting confirmation by the Senate.

While this may be true as far as public records are concerned, anyone who believes that nobody in the Republican administration knows what party the people it nominates for postmaster belongs to can climb the Washington monument on his ears.

At the Senate Post Office Committee — now under Democratic majority control—it is considered axiomatic that if the Eisenhower administration can find an eligible Republican to appoint as a postmaster, he'll get the nomination in preference to a Democrat. And it is generally assumed that the GOP wants to get as many Republican postmasters in office as it can, before the 1960 election.

The other side of this picture is that Republican officials are now beginning to charge openly that Democratic senators are holding up confirmation of nearly 1,000 Eisenhower postmaster appointments for impurely political reasons.

The specific Republican charge is that Democrats are trying to stall confirmation of Eisenhower appointees in the hope that vacancies can be filled by Democrats in '61.

This was the way it was done in the good old days, when postmaster appointments were considered fair political patronage for whatever party was in power.

But in recent years there has been some attempt to clean this up by selecting postmasters on a merit basis, even though they're still appointed by the President with Senate confirmation.

There are two routes by which candidates for postmasterships are selected. The first is by a noncompetitive examination for classified employes of the Postal Service. This gives career employes a chance to reach the top by sheer ability.

The second type of selection is by competitive examination conducted by U.S. Civil Service Commission. The three examinees making the highest grades are certified to the Post Office Department as qualified for postmasterships.

The postmaster general then selects any one of the three he wants to and recommends his appointment to the President, who then sends the nomination to Congress.

All nominations are referred to the Senate Post Office Committee for recommendation. The nominations are first sent to the Civil Service Commission for a routine check on whether the appointee meets residence and veterans preference law requirements. Post Office and Civil Service qualifications and regulations.

After Civil Service Commission clearance, the nomination is sent to the two senators from the state in which the nominee would serve as postmaster if confirmed.

The information is put on a card for both senators to okay and sign if they approve. But if either or both of them don't approve, the card is just kept by the objecting senator and that's the last ever heard of it. It's dead.

It is never known till the end of a session of Congress, every two years, how many appointees get this Senatorial pocket veto. But since January, 1953, President Eisenhower has sent to the Senate 8,846 nominations for postmaster. Of these, only 6,968 have been confirmed.

Of the 1,938 difference, 136 nominations were withdrawn and new names submitted. A total of 931 are now pending before the Senate. The others were victims of political or personal objections used to defeat the so-called merit system.

The Senate Post Office Committee meets in executive session after hearing any evidence against an appointee from his rivals or opponents. If the Committee votes to approve a nominee, the full Senate usually accepts this recommendation.

But any senator has the right to get up on the floor and say in effect, "This appointee is personally objectionable to me." That would kill it. But this has happened only a few times in the Eisenhower administration.

In 1812, Russian fur traders founded a post in California which they held until 1841, according to Encyclopedia Britannica.

In Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Scenes I'd like to see in television Westerns — but I'll never live long enough:

Gunsmoke—Matt Dillon walks deliberately down the dusty street while the passersby rush into buildings for shelter. The lean, dark man a block away walks toward Matt just as deliberately. Their firing hands hover a few inches from the holsters.

The lean, dark man draws and two shots are fired simultaneously.

"Dagnabbit," Matt yells. His pistol caught in the holster and he has wounded himself in the calf. The L. D. man, whose shot went through the neck of a nearby mule, laughs and rides out of town.

Doc hurries out to treat Matt while Chester says, "Doggone it, mister Dillon, yore jest goin' to have to practice more on thet thar' range."

Have Gun, Will Travel — The sleekly dressed Paladin is enjoying a liqueur while eavesdropping on talk at the next table in the hotel bar. A courier is telling a beautiful young lady that her father has died and the foreman has produced a phony will and has taken over the ranch.

Paladin saunters to her table and offers his card. "Perhaps I could be of service," he smiles. The beautiful young lady tears his card into small bits and throws them in his face. "You take care of your business and I'll take care of mine," she snaps.

Wagon Train — A scout brings doleful news back to the grizzled old wagonmaster. There are Indians on both sides of the canyon dead ahead. The wagonmaster shakes his head and asks about the route over the mountains.

"We might make it through, though we'd probably lose a few wagons," the scout says. "And we're getting low on water. All those cholera patients have been drinkin' more'n their share."

The wagonmaster peers down toward the canyon, where the Indians are chattering back and forth smoke. Then he gazes up at the snow-clad sierras.

"Only a fool would try to make it through," he said. "Pass the word: We're heading back to St. Joe."

Beleaguered Husbands Reply To Old Feminine Queries

Some of my men readers are retaliating to a recent column which asked questions women don't seem able to answer. Questions like: "Why, when Mama is scurrying around getting ready for guests, does Papa always decide he has to clean his guns or straighten out his fishing tackle box?"

Well, ladies, here's why—according to the men.

"It's simple. With Mama working so hard, we want to look busy, too," says one husband.

"What better excuse can we use for showing off a gun or fishing gear to the guests than that we've had it out getting it in order?" answers another.

"When the little woman is making a mountainous job out of having a few guests over for dinner, a man knows he can get out of the confusion by hiding in the den—if he can just look busy fooling around with his sports equipment," explains another.

"Besides," he adds, "when a woman is rushing around like crazy it's mighty peaceful to hold a fishing rod in your hand and remember the peace and quiet of your favorite fishing spot."

Well, there are three good reasons—at least from a masculine point of view.

Now for another question the men have been good enough to answer: "... w can a man walk into his own living room and not even notice new curtains or a new slipcover?"

"Some wives change things around so often a man never quite catches up," explains one husband.

"If wives would just give us a little while to relax before they accuse us of not noticing something we would probably get around to noticing," says another. "If a husband is never asked to help choose the furnishings of his home he doesn't actually have much interest in them," is another husband's explanation.

"Besides," he goes on, "if a poor husband notices and says, 'Those new blue curtains look nice,' his wife is sure to correct him with 'Those aren't blue, they're aqua'—or whatever it is that looks like blue to a man but some other color to a woman."

But the kindest answer of all to this question came from a husband who said: "When I get home I'm so glad to see my wife I just look at HER." That's an answer that ought to satisfy all women everywhere.

Paprika Adds Touch of Red To Fourth of July Salads

BY GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Food and Markets Editor

Large bowls of salads are important in Fourth of July "at home" celebrations. With cold cuts and hot casseroles, salads complete the easy but bountiful way to feed the visiting crowds.

Paprika, one of the richest sources of vitamin C, adds a touch of gay color for the patriotic weekend:

Green Salad Bowl with Paprika-Avocado Dressing: Tear a variety of salad greens (head lettuce, chicory, romaine, escarole, Boston or bibb lettuce, or watercress) into bite-size pieces. Arrange tomato wedges, sliced cucumber and radishes over the top. Toss with paprika-avocado dressing. The amount of salad greens to use depends upon the number of people you wish to serve. Allow about 1 cup of greens per person.

Paprika-Avocado Salad Dressing (Yield: 1½ cups)

Combine 3/4 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon paprika, 1/4 teaspoon powdered mustard, ½ teaspoon ground white pepper, 2 tablespoons sugar, ½ teaspoon instant minced onion, 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder, 1 cup salad oil. Let stand 1 hour. Add 1/4 cup avocado puree (about 1/4 medium avocado) and 1/4 cup fresh lemon juice. Beat well. Serve over mixed salad greens or fruit salad.

Paprika-Shrimp and Cottage Cheese Mold (Yield: 6 to 8 servings)

Combine 2 cups creamy cottage cheese, 1/4 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon ground white pepper, 1 teaspoon paprika and 1 cup diced shrimp (4½-ounce can). Soften 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin in ½ cup cold water and 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice. Place over hot water (not boiling) to melt. Add to the cheese and shrimp. Rinse a 5-cup ring mold in cold water and fill with the mixture. Chill until ready to serve. Unmold on a large serving plate. Fill center with watercress. Garnish with paprika.

MONDAY'S DINNER: Cold sliced ham, scalloped potatoes and onions, corn on cob, seeded rolls, butter or margarine, mixed green salad, paprika-avocado dressing, blueberries, coffee, tea, milk.

BIGGEST BRAKES!
One of the 7 big bests Chevrolet gives you over any car in its field

The published opinions of independent experts, plus comparative facts and figures, bear us out on this: Chevy gives you 7 big bests over its competitors—beginning with biggest brakes. Not only biggest, but built with bonded linings for up to 66% longer life. To prove its advantage, Chevy out-stopped both the other leading low-priced cars in direct competitive tests, conducted by NASCAR,* of repeated stops from highway speeds.

BEST TRADE-IN
Check the figures in any N.A.D.A.† Guide Book. Chevy used car prices last year averaged up to $128 higher than comparable models of the "other two."

BEST STYLE
It's the only car of the leading low-priced 3 that's unmistakably modern in every line. "In its price class," says POPULAR SCIENCE magazine, "a new high in daring styling."

BEST ECONOMY
No doubt about it: two Chevrolet 6's won their class in the famous Mobilgas Economy Run, got the best mileage of any full-size car, 22.38 m.p.g.

BEST ROOM
Official dimensions reported to A.M.A.‡ make this clear. For example, Chevy front seat hip room is up to 5.9 inches wider than comparable cars.

BEST ENGINE
Every motor magazine has given Chevrolet's standard and Corvette V8's unstinted praise. As SPORTS CARS ILLUSTRATED puts it: "Indeed this device is surely the most wonderfully responsive engine available today at any price."
*National Association for Stock Car Advancement and Research.

BEST RIDE
MOTOR TREND magazine calls Chevy "the smoothest, most quiet, softest riding car in its price class." You'll be able to tell this yourself, instantly. Stop by your Chevrolet dealer's for a look at a whole raft of little advantages besides these 7 big ones.

Brave Little Rebel

Chapter 13: Prepare For Raid

"Oh, yes," nodded Noah, remembering the trader who had said he would stop at the fort and tell Col. Cain that they would soon arrive.

"You do have Col. Cain's little girl with you, don't you," Carson asked.

"Yes, she is the little girl who was standing here with my wife," Noah explained.

"What makes you think these renegade Indians are lying in wait for us, Young," questioned Boley.

"Well," Carson went on with his story, "when they saw me, they were hopping' mad. Several of them gave chase, but I had a head start, and a faster horse.

"They didn't want to come too close. If you saw them it wouldn't be a surprise. But I could bet you they've been watching this outfit most of the day and laying their plans.

"I got a good look at them too," Carson continued. "They were all covered with war paint. They mean business. I figure they'll lie low over there 'til late tonight, then when they think we're all asleep, they'll pounce down on us like a bee on a sleepin' bear."

What's To Be Done?

John Boley shifted his holsters and patted the six guns at his sides. "Not on us they won't," he grinned. "What do you propose we do, Noah?"

Noah Culp had been lost deep in thought. "Carson," he said kindly as he patted the man on the back. "You go rub down your horse, and get a bite to eat.

"And John," he spoke to his friend, "we'd better call a meeting of all the men, so we can make plans to defend our people. We must not waste another minute. They must know by now, that Carson Young has reached us with a warning, and they may not wait 'till later tonight to attack."

Emmy Lou Hears Whispers

Emmy Lou lay quietly on her pallet in the hot wagon. Nearby lay Simon, who was no nearer sleep than she. Outside they could hear whispers as the men moved about tightening the circle of wagons and preparing to defend the little group from the renegade Indians who lay in wait behind the ridge waiting to attack at the time they chose.

Horses, arms and ammunition were placed in the center of the circle. The women and older boys were instructed to keep their heads low, while they stood by their men, ready to reload a gun as it dropped beside them, and to place in the ready hand, a freshly reloaded one.

"Simon," Emmy Lou whispered as she raised up on her elbow and tried to see through the darkness. "Are you asleep?"

"No," answered Simon. "I don't know why Dad wouldn't let me help," he complained bitterly. "He made me come in here and go to bed just like a girl."

Emmy Lou's Scared

"I'm sorry, Simon," she sympathized. "But try to remember, that your father is doing what he thinks is best. Are you afraid?" she asked timidly.

"No," came the reply.

"I am," sniffed Emmy Lou beginning to cry. "I don't like Indians. Why do they want to harm us, Simon? We haven't done a thing to them," she sobbed.

Simon crept out of his bed and crawled across the wagon to Emmy Lou.

"Don't cry, Emmy Lou," he soothed as he put a protecting arm about her shoulders. "I'll take care of you," he promised. "See, I sharpened my new knife today, and I won't let anyone harm you."

Stamps In The News

Air Mail Anniversary

Forty years ago Hungary issued its first Air Mail stamps. Now, in order to commemorate that anniversary, it has issued one stamp depicting the Millenium Monument in Budapest as seen from the air with a view of the Museum of Fine Arts in the background with airplanes flying above.

Another stamp depicts a part of the town of Sopron with an airplane in the sky.

Formosa Honors Aid

Ten years ago the United States began to aid the Republic of China in rural construction work on Formosa. In celebration of this, four new stamps, identical in design, but ranging in price from 20 cents to $3.00 in Chinese currency. It is the first time any foreign government has issued a stamp honoring a United States aid program.

The design pictures a Chinese farmer plowing with a Water Buffalo hitched to the plow. The background features a combined land and seascape showing a railroad and electrification line and a fishing boat off shore.

Ghana Customs

Ghana has issued four new stamps of unusual design showing the cultural background of the young African nation. The ½ cent stamp shows a Kente cloth design and the 2½ cent depicts talking drums and an elephant horn blower. The 1/3 cent is a symbol of greeting.

Two of the designs were by artists outside of Ghana. One was by Miriam Karoly of Israel and one by Angel Medi... of Uruguay.

Honors NATO

The new blue and white Nato stamp issued in April 1959 will celebrate the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Rare Item

The stamp collection of the late William G. Straus contains a free franked cover sent to San Francisco by Pony Express in 1860 by Senator William McKendree Gwin of California.

The strange but interesting thing about this cover is that it was then absolutely against the rules of the Central Overland California and Pikes Peak Express Company (operators of the Pony Express) to carry any free letters!

PERMANENT MOON BASE

By Walter B. Hendrickson Jr.

After the first manned expedition to earth after landing on the moon we may want to establish a permanent base on that body.

This base could use the buildings left by the first expedition for laboratories and living quarters but it would need greenhouses for raising its own food and an atomic power plant to provide power during the two-week-long night on the moon. (The first expedition would carry only a solar power plant to save weight).

To build and maintain the moon base a fleet of moon rockets will be needed to make the trip between an orbit around earth's equator and the moon.

Since these ships will never enter the atmosphere they will need no streamlining, and will have none. They are most likely to be built out of the empty hulls of rockets which were used to supply the space station.

Some of these rockets will carry enough fuel for a round trip to the moon; others will be one way rockets used only to carry supplies to the moon base.

To get the permanent base started four rockets will be needed, two round-trip rockets and two one-way rockets. The round-trip rockets will carry the personell for the base. One of the one-way rockets will carry the form for the base and the other will carry an atomic reactor.

Arrive At Sunrise

The flight of these four ships would be timed so that they would arrive just after the sun rose over the base on the moon.

As soon as the rockets have landed the ship carrying reactor will be dismantled leaving the reactor standing on the rocket's landing legs. The reactor will then be started and cables will be strung from it to the buildings left by the first expedition to the moon.

When this is finished the moon base men will start working on the farm for the base. We'll tell you about this Moon Farm next time.

General Ticket Study

By Joseph A. Smith

Let's Get Going!

If you've been following the recent series on study toward the Novice ticket, you're now a full fledged Novice—congratulations!

When you've been on the air awhile, you'll realize the limitations placed on you as a Novice (maybe you have already) and you'll want to start in studying for the General ticket. (If you're not quite ready, clip these instructions beginning today and save in envelope or scrap book for that day that's coming sooner than you think!)

Lets Get Started!

Among Novice limitations are power, the use of crystal control only, and operation on a very limited range of extremely crowded frequencies. While the Novice would usually like to operate on phone (modulating the R. F. carrier) very few have the two-meter crystal controlled gear required for such phone operation.

Most of all, you as our Novice would just like to join more advanced friends on 75 meters and other more desirable frequencies. With a General ticket you may use a good-stable V.F.O. (Varable Frequency Oscillator) thus enabeling over-the-band operation.

So, in due time the old urge to study for that General or Conditional ticket is sure to overcome your desire just to rag chew. Too, the Novice ticket is good for only one year and, of course, is not renewable.

What's To Do?

So, what must you do to qualify for this next ticket? You must increase your code speed to at least 13 w.p.m., and take a more thorough theory test covering all phases of amateur radio — a.m. phone, transmitter theory, some simple mathematical problems, some of the F.C.C. laws on operating, and some not too difficult schematic diagrams. Yes, it's more difficult, but even a youngster can pass it after adequate preparation. Above all, the additional privileges gained when you hold either a General or Conditional license will more than compensate for the time spent in study etc.

Study Material

For serious study you would use the following material:

Let's Go Birding

Bird of Character

By Emma Mae Leonhard

"I heard the song of a bird this morning that sounded somewhat like a Robin's, and yet it was more beautiful. It seemed to sing with more feeling," one of the readers of our bird articles said to us last week.

"Did you see the singer?" we asked.

"No, it was hidden in the top of an Elm and just wouldn't come out for me to see. It seemed to want me to come to it." We immediately thought of the Rose-breasted Grosbeak.

Soon after this short conversation, another person in the same neighborhood told us that she had heard the Rose-breasted Grosbeak that morning. That was undoubtedly what the first person had already suggested.

Although the Rose breasted Grosbeak isn't as plentiful as sparrows or even wrens or catbirds, it has been treating us in Jacksonville with liberal singing this spring since mid-April. Above the medley of different bird songs, his or her melodies have rolled out to us every day in Jacksonville, at the Country Club, or at Lake Mauvaisterre. Unlike most other birds, the female also sings.

Masterful Singer

This bird is a masterful singer. It has a rich and mellow voice which it seems to use without any effort. In fact, the Grosbeak's song reflects the bird's wholesome character. The singer rarely seems nervous and acts with much dignity and precision.

When we hear it singing, we feel that it is singing to the whole world and to us too, not at us. It really doesn't seem to be singing to indicate that it is the home-steader of a certain territory like many birds, but just as a part of the world of beauty.

Sometimes early in the spring, our Rose breasted Grosbeak sings or gurgles as it flies. Even then it doesn't seem hurried, but acts with a quick dignity, a restrained forcefulness, and a directed speed. Perhaps some of us might be able to accomplish more at times if we could learn its controlled speed, and "Slow down and Live."

Metallic Call Note

At times, instead of this mellow song, it lets out a sharp metallic note which sounds like "eek." If you once learn to recognize this call note, you will have no difficulty in detecting this bird's presence. Then you may soon hear its sincere mellow song, which may come from either the female or the male, as we have said before.

However, the two are very different in appearance: the female looks like an over-grown sparrow with a large beak and two broad white ming-bars; the male is black and white, with a large conscicuous triangular patch of rose-red on its breast. We hope that you have also enjoyed this bird of model character, the Rose- Grosbeak.

What Do You Think?

WHAT IS A GOOD BOOK?

In my opinion, the first and most important job of a good book is to be thought-provoking.

A good book increases its reader's understanding and knowledge. This knowledge does not have to be entirely new to the reader. Instead, it is sufficient for the book to present its material in a different style to give the reader new insight into the material or to give him a new interpretation of the material.

A good book, if it is truly "good," must, in most cases, be rather slowly read. It should be "chewed and digested" as Sir Francis Bacon said. If a person tries to read a good book too fast he misses the meaning of the book's material. Concentration is also very important.

Not Frivolous

A good book is not overly descriptive or frivolous. For example, if it is a scientific publication such as "Photosynthesis in Plants," it should have only those details vital to the understanding of the material. In other types of books, such as Thomas Hardy's "Return of the Native," description of the heath and the book's characters is necessary to provide the proper setting and mood for the story and to help us to better understand and criticize the characters' actions.

A good book should pose a problem or a situation or a fact which it either solves, explains, gives new light upon, or gives reasons for its "unsolvability." If it does this, it has justified its purpose for being written.

What do you think a good book should be like?

Shipwreck At Iceland

By Dan Walker

Editor's note: The following story was sent in by Junior page reader Dan Walker of 517 E. Chambers St. Dan is in the Sixth grade at Our Saviour's School. All Junior page readers who like to write are invited to send in original stories, poems, jokes and riddles.

This story takes place from 1809 to 1810. It all began when I and my men were assigned to a mission—a mission to take a trip around the world.

We were to go from Memel, Russia, to the North Pole, and then to the South Pole. Before our voyage we sent our experienced Russian captain, Baron von Tuesch, to the Mariner, a Russian vessel, to get supplies.

However, we took off the next day and the supplies came in two days later. Twenty-nine week, of distress with little food and very little to drink. This was because the water we were sailing in was salt water.

Finally we reached land. It looked like a bunch of white mountains, but we were glad to see land. Well, we looked around the place and finally saw some civilization.

We realized we had landed in Reykjavik, Iceland. It was as cold as ever and there was no food or water yet. We couldn't go back to Memel, for our ship was wrecked when we landed on the rocks.

We couldn't build a raft for nothing could grow in such a cold place. Besides, three-fourths of our men were killed on the voyage or in the shipwreck. We sent two scouts to see what was around these mountains called Mt. Hecla. We found little or no civilization there, so we gave up the search and continued to go on.

Only Five Survive

The year had now passed. Many of the crew were suffering or were dead. Finally, five of us were left out of the original twenty-three. The hardships were still severe. The names of the remaining five were: Mekerdoff, Chievinksky, Nederzoff, Leinstien, and Mech.

We were now marooned for at least twenty-six more weeks. Every day we prayed that we could go back to Memel, but we could not for there was no wood to build any ship, and the sea around Reykjavik was just ice.

Finally, people from Russia had heard of our experiences. They were unable to send supplies, however, because the higher-ups thought if the explorers took on such great risks, they should be able to endure these hardships.

Miss Rosendahl Of Petersburg Bride Of Robert Engebrecht In Church Ceremony

The Petersburg Bethlehem Lutheran Church was the scene of an impressive double ring wedding ceremony uniting Miss Ann Rosendahl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Rosendahl of Petersburg, and Robert Engebrecht, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Engebrecht of Jacksonville, Sunday afternoon, June 21, at 3 o'clock.

The Reverend Herbert C. Rose of Jacksonville officiated for the ceremony performed before an altar decked with bouquets of blue daisies and white glads. White satin bows marked the pews.

Traditional selections were played by the organist, Mrs. Robert Cody. She also accompanied Miss Dorothy Engebrecht, sister of the groom, who sang "The Song of Ruth" before the ceremony and "The Lord's Prayer" during the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a lovely full length gown of nylon organza. The fitted bodice featured a scoop-neck with sequin and lace frosts, and shirred short sleeves. The bouffant skirt was designed with flying panels appliqued in French sequin lace. A lace half-hat held her veil of sheer illusion.

She carried a white Bible topped by a white orchid with streamers of stephanotis and ivy. Her jewelry, a triple strand of pearls, was a gift of the groom.

Two Attendants

Miss Bonita Prior of Bentley attended as maid of honor and Miss Sharon Mason of Pana as bridesmaid. They wore exquisite gowns of light blue nylon organza. The gowns were styled in ballerina length with three small bows on the back of the skirt, and small lace insets in the fitted bodice. The small headpieces were of matching color and they carried a colonial bouquet of blue daisies.

Donnette Engebrecht and Ruby Kleinschmidt, nieces of the groom, were flower girls. They wore dresses of light blue organdy, trimmed with white lace, and they carried white baskets of rosebuds and petals.

Donald Engebrecht, brother of the groom, served as best man and Robert Purpura, Cleveland, Ohio, a classmate of the groom, as groomsman. The ushers were Richard Rodgers of Jacksonville and Rollin Rosendahl, Petersburg, brother of the bride.

Miss Barbara Heyen and Miss Joan Neumann, Petersburg, cousins of the bride, registered the guests.

Hold Reception

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the church dining room, which was decorated in the bride's chosen colors, blue and white. In the center of the serving table was a three tiered wedding cake decorated with white frosting and topped with a miniature bride and groom.

Presiding at the reception were Mrs. Dean Toohey, Miss Sara Connelly and Miss Virginia Burkey, all friends of the bride.

After a short honeymoon the couple will reside at 1127 West Lafayette in Jacksonville.

Mrs. Engebrecht is a graduate of Petersburg High School and of Passavant Memorial Area Hospital School of Nursing in Jacksonville and is now employed there.

Mr. Engebrecht, a graduate of Jacksonville High School and Illinois College in Jacksonville, is attending Northwestern University Medical School in Chicago. In the fall the young couple will return to Chicago where Mr. Engebrecht will continue his studies.

RECONDITIONING SHIPS

TEXAS CITY, Tex. (AP) — Some Texas fleet tanker operators now cut their ships in half — right across the middle — in a radical new plan they call "jumbolizing."

The surgery takes away an old, worn-out midsection. Then a larger midsection is inserted.

Result: A bigger, better oil tanker with the same power and speed at a fraction of the cost of a new vessel, and done in a fraction of the time required to build a new ship.

Hospital Therapy Patients Present Auxiliary Program

The summer luncheon meeting of the Women's Auxiliary to Our Saviour's hospital was held Wednesday noon, June 24, at the Hotel Dunlap banquet room. Tables were beautifully decorated with centerpieces fashioned from purple straw hats holding purple and pink tinted daisies. Mrs. Robert Davis and Mrs. Robert Duncan were in charge of arrangements.

Following luncheon Mrs. Joseph E. Doyle, president, conducted a brief business session. Miss Olive Burnett announced two more new Life Memberships, Mrs. Maurice Walsh and Mrs. Robert E. Kaiser, bringing the total Life Memberships in the Auxiliary to 30.

Reports were heard from the secretary, treasurer and from the Gift Shop Committee.

Mrs. Charles Ryan announced two new members, Mrs. E. H. Doolin and Miss Helen Cobb.

Outstanding Program

Mrs. Cloyd Schumm and Mrs. William Hodgson, program co-chairmen, arranged for an outstanding program presented by members of the Music Therapy Department, Jacksonville State Hospital.

The group consisted of Mrs. Elsch, music therapist at the hospital; George Winston, Chief of Music Therapy, Public Welfare Department, Springfield and seven talented patients from the Hospital who demonstrated music therapy used in the various wards.

The therapists point out such a program serves a multi-purpose of objective: music supplies an aesthetic need of the patients with a day made brighter by sheer listening and entertainment derived from music.

The demonstration pointed in a tangible manner why therapists find at possible to break down resistance to socialization on the part of many patients and are then able to stimulate interest and activity where a void ordinary exists.

Inter-personal relationship between therapist and patient is the prime and ultimate goal. The talented patients, actively engaged in this ward program of music, are afforded gratification of knowing they are helping others on the recovery road and by the same token helping themselves.

Patients are proud of the part they personally play in bringing into public focus the fact that mental illness is no longer considered hopeless, a point that it is imperative the public understand, if the recovered patient is ever again to be accepted by society.

The Auxiliary members were greatly impressed by the excellent program.

PROVES HIS POINT

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The man stood before the judge for sentencing on a burglary charge.

"My 18-year-old stepson had gone out stealing stuff," said Albert E. Grant, the 33-year-old defendant. "I had to do a wrong myself to show him crime doesn't pay."

Superior Judge Raul Castro agreed it didn't pay. He denied a probation plea and sent Grant to prison for seven to eight years.

Committee On Youth Opportunity Issues Second Section Of Report

Cite Serious Housing Shortage, Need For Family Counseling Service

By FRANK B. NORBURY

This is the second in a series of reports prepared by the Morgan County Committee on the White House Conference for children and youth.

Today's report, on family living, was prepared under the chairmanship of Dr. Frank Norbury. Others on his committee are Dr. Robert Lisensky, Mrs. Hazel Pierce, Judge John B. Wright, Mrs. Paul Norris, and Miss Navana Eyre.

Other reports which will follow are on health, vocational counseling, recreation and religion.

In the report on education, the names of Mrs. Arthur Hallerberg and Mrs. Walter Gilmore were inadvertently omitted from the list of those who prepared the report.

Although this subcommittee is called the Subcommittee on Family Living, it is probably better considered as a subcommittee on the problems of family living. For the healthy, adjusted family, without serious social problems was not studied and attention was focused on the situations which threaten the family and the agencies in the community which are available to assist with these problems.

The subcommittee gratefully acknowledges the cooperation of the officials of many public and private agencies in the county who were interviewed and who contributed data for the fact-finding. These included the County Judge, State's Attorney, County Clerk, Circuit Clerk, County Health Department, County Relief Office, The Illinois Public Aid Commission—Morgan County Office, the State of Illinois Division of Child Welfare Services, the Special Services Division of School District 117, the Salvation Army, and the Morgan County Chapter of the American Red Cross.

The County

Morgan County has a population of about 35,000 people with probably little change in population between 1950 and 1959. Twenty-five thousand of these people live in the city of Jacksonville and the contiguous village of South Jacksonville and the other 10,000 live in smaller towns of less than 3,000 population and on farms. Except for a few industries depending upon river traffic which are in the town of Meredosia and local business in the other small towns, business and industry are concentrated in Jacksonville. State institutions, light industry, education, and retail trade are the chief employers. The population mobility, and employment have been relatively stable during the decade. Houses are 57% owner-occupied.

Social Problems

Here, we have included statistics on major social problems which might be considered to be evidences of difficulties in family living:

a.) Illegitimate births: In 1958, of 666 resident live births in the county, 12 were illegitimate. This shows little change from 1950 at which time 8 of 616 live births were illegitimate.

b.) Dependency: 24 children were made dependent wards of the court in 1958. This is about average for recent years.

c.) Delinquency: Serious delinquency, requiring committment to the Youth Commission is low in the county. There were 3 such cases in 1958, 4 in 1957.

d.) Mentally Ill: Mental Illness, severe enough to require committment to a State Hospital has shown little change. There were 26 committments in 1958, 24 in 1957.

e.) Divorces: There were 61 resident divorces in 1958, 48 in 1957.

Family Counseling Services Available

The county has no organized counseling or casework services available from private or public agencies except for those dealing with specific financial grants (relief office and Public Aid Commission). In school district 117 which includes Jacksonville, South Jacksonville, Woodson, Murrayville, and nearby rural areas, counseling on school problems is available through the Division of Special Services of the School District. This agency is active, professionally staffed, and supervised. Ministers and physicians perform most of the marriage counseling and counseling for the handicapped. The State Division of Crippled Childrens' Services hold clinics in the county about twice a year. No homemakers' service is available in the county but it does not appear that children have had to be placed away from home because this service is not available.

Housing

Housing is a serious problem throughout the county. There are some unsanitary, dilapidated, and crowded houses in Meredosia, a few in Waverly, and some scattered over the county on farms. The County Relief Office states that they have a number of families living in houses on farms that were once tenant houses. These are in very poor condition but the county only allows $20 per month for rent and these houses can sometimes be rented for $10-$15 per month with no improvements.

The greatest problem in housing in Morgan County lies in the city of Jacksonville. These conditions are apparent to social workers, health officers, physicians, indeed to anyone who takes an extended tour of the city. Certain areas near the downtown district have no water or sewer facilities. High rents, problems of sanitation, dilapidation, crowding, and doubling up of families are all found in the city.

A building code was adopted in Jacksonville as the first step necessary to housing improvement. The code is not retroactive and many of its regulations are recommendations only, not mandatory rules. The City Plan, at present being prepared by the Kincaid Company will include information on housing and recommendations for correction.

In Morgan County, there is little work that entails seasonal workers or migrants, however there is a minority racial group whose income is so low and irregular that it is almost impossible for them to maintain satisfactory standards of living for their families. This is predominantely a problem in the city of Jacksonville. The condition of their housing is a pressing problem and little has been done to improve their living conditions.

In dealing with the problem of financial assistance for unemployed persons, the state-federal unemployment benefits are available first. The two major organizations for financial assistance are the County Department of General Assistance (County Relief) and the Illinois Public Aid Commission (state aid, especially Aid-to-Dependent Children which is partially supported by federal funds). The County Relief is administered by the county. The individual applying must have been a resident of the county for six months. If assistance is granted, the following are the allowances:

1.) Food (two people) $32 plus $5 for each child under 18.
2.) Rent $20 per month.
3.) Fuel $10 per month ($13.50 outside of the city).

In addition, there are special grants for hospital and medical expenses. These take about 40 per cent of the budget. The total budget for County Relief in 1958 was $80,000 of which $71,000 was expended. County Relief provides services for about 100 families and 250 persons at any one time.

The Illinois Public Aid Commission is a state agency with a county office. Its budget is prepared by the Legislature and its grants administered in the county with advice from the county advisory committee. By statute, a person must be a resident of Illinois for one year before receiving services from the commission. The principal function dealing with children is the Aid to Dependent Children program, a jointly federal-state endeavor which provides funds to care for children whose parents cannot or will not support them. The Aid to Dependent Children program services about 110 families or about 400 persons in the county at any one time.

If a family should be stranded in this area, they would find aid from the Salvation Army. This agency operates on a total annual budget of $7,100; salaries, building up-keep, and rent for the house of the director must be paid before money can be used for other programs. The aid to stranded families consists of a meal ticket, one night's lodging, and $5 worth of gas.

Families of servicemen or veterans can obtain assistance from the county chapter of the American Red Cross.

Family Life and Parent Education

In Morgan county, there are few programs for adults or young people on family living. The county Health Department in conjunction with the hospitals operate six classes a year for expectant parents and there is a weekly well-child conference in the Health Department which accomplishes some parent education. The PTA and the Home Bureau at times conduct programs on family living.

The Association for Exceptional Children formerly had classes for parents of handicapped children but these have been disbanded. Many organizations work with youth in an attempt to develop responsibility. These include the Scouts, 4-H, YMCA, Youth Employment Service, Junior Police, and the summer school programs. There is a multiplicity of problems which seem to arise in family living and there appears to be a definite need for more educational programs in these areas.

Services For Dependent, Neglected And Delinquent Children

The county court is the agency which handles these situations. The county judge is advised and assisted by the probation officer and the State of Illinois Department of Public Welfare, Division of Child Welfare Services. This latter organization functions through its regional office in Springfield. From 1941-59, there was an office in the county, but this had to be closed.

The county court with the assistance of these agencies determines if a home is unsuitable and if a child should be removed from the house. Efforts are made to help the family manage in their own home if possible. There were an average of 27 children in foster homes in Morgan county during 1958. The cost of such care was $16,000 which comes from tax funds and orders on the parents. The agencies are generally satisfied with the foster homes they can secure.

Foster homes are occasionally used for delinquent children when the delinquent child is on probation and the natural parents are not considered to be suitable. Children are generally detained in their own home pending court decisions and arrangements. Occasionally, the Salvation Army is called upon for temporary placement. Children involved in serious delinquency and crime are not considered suitable for foster homes because of lack of supervision. Some handicapped children also go elsewhere because of special institutions for the handicapped (blind, deaf, mentally retarded, etc.)

Runaway children are usually handled by the police who take them home. The services of the probation officer and the Illinois Youth Commission are available for counseling for youth who have run afoul of the law. Facilities for severely emotionally disturbed children are not available. The Institute for Juvenile Research operates a visiting clinic for diagnostic purposes and the State Department of Public Welfare operates institutions for the blind, deaf, some veterans' children, the mentally retarded, and the psychotic child.

County Gains and Losses 1950-1959

After 19 years of operation, the Morgan County Child Welfare Office ceased to function in 1959. This office had been a joint state-county function which was concerned with primarily the problems of dependency and foster homes. The State Division of Child Welfare Services decided to place the professional staff elsewhere and the county was unable to provide its own social work staff. The functions of the office have been assumed by the Regional Office of the State Division of Child Welfare Services in Springfield, Illinois.

During the decade, the county can count as a gain the development of an active professionally staffed Division of Special Services for School District 117 which includes the major urban population of the county.

County Needs and Recommendations

After study and discussion of the material in the accompanying questionnaire, the subcommittee on family living concludes that the following are important needs for the county.

a.) There is a need in the county for an agency for adults to go to for counseling services regarding marital problems, adoption problems, and other problems related to children. Specifically, a family service agency would be most desirable.

b.) There is a serious housing shortage in Morgan County. High rents, unsanitary and dilapidated houses, crowding, and doubling up of families are evident. There is a need for replacement of these dwellings by moderately priced housing.

c.) There is a need for specially trained juvenile officers on the Jacksonville Police Force and the Morgan County Sheriff's Force.

d.) There is a need for temporary homes for children who are awaiting foster-home placement or a change in foster homes. There is also a need for special detention facilities for juvenile offenders. In the past, some such children have been kept in the jail.

The subcommittee wishes to call attention to the fact that these needs, especially the first two require adequate financial planning and that the community must be willing to provide financial support for them. It is therefore recommended that these county needs and recommendations be considered further by a continuing organization of representative citizens such as the Community Council.

New Army Chief Combines Savvy With Conviction

Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, Army Chief of Staff as of July 1, brings the combat experience of two wars to his new office. Pictures here show highlights of the general's military career, which includes staff officer's duties as well as front line command. Lemnitzer graduated from West Point in 1920 and advanced through the grades to full general (1955). He has seen service with some of the greatest military minds of the modern era, both U.S. and British. He holds the Distinguished Service Medal, along with numerous foreign honors. Lemnitzer, 59, is a great exponent of the small, well-equipped, well-trained army of technical experts, ready to move at a moment's notice to put out "brush-fire" wars. He succeeds Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, retiring from the chief of staff post.

Lemnitzer, a brigadier general, studies map in Western Task Force H.Q. in Gibraltar before invasion of Africa in 1942.

Alexander, C-in-C of Allies in Italy, tours the front lines with British Gen. Kirkman and Lemnitzer late in the campaign.

DOUBLE YOUR OUTDOOR FUN

with outdoor lighting

Whether it's croquet or cooking, why call it quits on fun when the sun goes down? Lights in the yard literally double your outdoor fun. Chances are, like most folks, you'll find those cool, quiet, after-dark hours are the best time of all to enjoy your yard and garden.

Yard lighting is almost like gaining another room during warm weather months . . . and the cost is most reasonable. We recommend, however, that you do the job right. Use permanent, weatherproof outlets and insulated cable (the new flexible underground plastic cable can be placed in a shallow trench). The modest expense and effort involved really pay because you'll enjoy the convenience and safety of outdoor lighting all year 'round.

Fashions For Little Miss Cotton

Her Wardrobe Stresses Giant Plaids

The wardrobe for Terry Bradley, Little Miss Cotton of 1959, includes 34 costumes for classroom, dressy wear and sportswear. The fashions shown here hint at autumn and school clothes to come. Dressed for a party (left), Terry wears a bright cotton plaid with white pique bodice edged in bands of wide lace. Gray-and-black plaid is brightened with red trim on bodice and red velveteen bow at the waist. The bigger the plaid, the better this year. Brilliantly-colored giant plaid (center) is set off by novel double collar and soft, wide bow. The Victorian look for little girls appears in this dress (right) of cotton broadcloth. It's cut pinafore style, has white collar, cuffs and piping for added sparkle. Terry is eight years old and lives in Providence, R. I.

BY GAILE DUGAS
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK —(NEA)— Following in the footsteps of the Maid of Cotton is a little girl who's known as Little Miss Cotton of 1959.

Actually, she's a fashion ambassadress in much the same manner as the Maid of Cotton. But since she's only eight years old, her wardrobe is slightly different —though it's all cotton.

This year, Little Miss Cotton is little Miss Terry Bradley of Providence Rhode Island. She's just finishing the second grade and she's studying ballet and tap dancing in addition to her regular lessons.

Recently, Terry paid a visit to New York to visit the United Nations, the Statue of Liberty, theaters and, of course, the stores. While she was here, she was outfitted with her all-cotton wardrobe.

Her wardrobe stresses plaid for fall and leans heavily toward the bold plaid combinations. She has many giant plaids in combinations of black-and-white, black-and-brown and red-and-green. But she also has solid-color cottons in royal blue, red and gold. Prints in her wardrobe stress the Victorian and Provincial pattern.

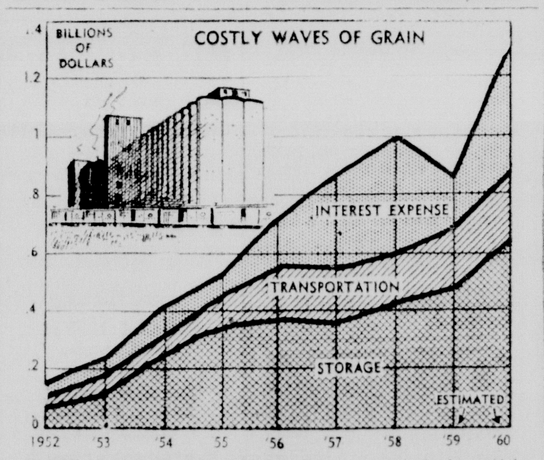
BAD LUCK SENDS TWO COUSINS TO EMERGENCY ROOM

JERSEYVILLE — Two young cousins injured in separate accidents arrived at the emergency room of the Jersey Community hospital Tuesday evening at about the same time.

Judy Wilson, ten year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Wilson, who reside on Lovejoy street, sustained a double fracture of the right arm when she fell from a bicycle Tuesday. She was taken to the Jersey Community hospital where she received emergency treatment and was removed from there to the Alton Memorial hospital. She remained at the Memorial overnight and was released Wednesday.

At the time Judy was in the emergency room of the Jersey Community hospital, her cousin, Jerry Summers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Verlin Summers of North Giddings avenue, was brought in for treatment of a cut sustained when he was hit by a baseball. Seven stitches were required to close the injury above his eye.



BUMPER CROP OF EXPENSES — America's bountiful "amber waves of grain" are once again swirling into storage elevators. Charged with sidetracking much of it to maintain prices to farmers is the federal Commodity Credit Corp. News-chart shows the department's rising interest costs on money it borrows—also increasing storage and transportation expenses. These two items total more than two million dollars a day. Storage of wheat alone next year will cost about 300 million.

With The Girl Scouts

Camping season at Shagbark on Lake Jacksonville is ended and the Brownies and Girl Scouts have turned the environs back to the bugs, frogs, turtles and snakes—these latter can now relax and resume life as usual after the interruption of four weeks of intermittent captivity and pursuit!

Mrs. Alexander Jones, camp director, deserves a great deal of credit for the success of the camping program. Under her able direction nearly 400 girls participated in nature hikes, crafts, learned to cook meals over an open fire and the older girls spent two nights each week in tents at the site. By actual count 417 persons took part in Shagbark camping, that total including counselors and assistants.

At White Hall 88 persons participated and in Carrollton, 107, bringing the total for camping participants in the Illinois Prairie Council to an all-time high of 612 campers this month.

The first three weeks at Shagbark were extremely successful from everyone's point of view, campers and counselors. The fourth week was a little difficult for the counselors because there was a lack of shoppers, drivers and unit leaders when the enrollment of girls was the largest of any week. However, the girls made up in spirit for the lack of help and pitched in to do their camping chores.

Counselors

Counselors this week were Mrs. George Trutter, Mrs. James Rawlings, Virginia Wisdom, Pat Little, Mrs. Robert Bergschneider, Mrs. Murle Dolen, Mrs. Russell Lewis, Mrs. Chester Timmons.

Mrs. John Rutherford, Mrs. Donald Ryan, Mrs. Harold Morris, Mrs. Mary E. Lashmet, Mrs. T. J. Doyle, Mrs. Floyd Sorrill, Mrs. Jeanne Ann Herring, Mrs. Connie Roegge, Mrs. Howard Choate, Mrs. Marjorie Boes, Mrs. Lawrence Quinlan.

Mrs. Lillie Maberry, Mrs. Simpson, Susan Chumley, Mary Ann Welch, Mrs. Daniel, Mrs. Chumley, Mrs. Floyd Glover, Barbara Haggard, Mrs. Mim Lashmet.

Other helpers at the cabin were Susan Chumley, Lynda and Suzanne Hartman. Special guests overnight Thursday were Virginia Gronseth and Carol Abbott, two of the Roundup girls who will be going to Colorado today.

Unit Names

Pike's Peak, Beaver Ranch, Riverside View, The Bunchies, The Butterfinger Sit - Upons, Whitefeet, Wild Bill's Unit, Lake Bugs and Trail's End Corral were the unit names for the nine groups camping this week. Each unit did its own cooking over separate fires and the girls were assigned kaper duties such as fire - building, wood - gathering, cooking, washing dishes, etc., in addition to their other camping activities and craft work.

Leaders' nicknames showed the girls' ingenuity: Mrs. Bergschneider, Berk; Mrs. Dolen, Jerk; Mrs. Timmons, Curly; Mrs. Lewis, Freckles; Mrs. Ryan, Harey; Mrs. Rutherford, Bunny; Mrs. Morris, Brownie; Mrs. Lashmet, Elf; Mrs. Doyle, Kokomo; Mrs. Sorrill, Lady; Mrs. Herring, Shaggy; Mrs. Choate, Candy; Mrs. Roegge, Sandy; Mrs. Trutter, Annie; Mrs. Rawlings, Dale; Mrs. Maberry, Fairy; Mrs. Patsy Rutherford, Grasshopper, Mrs. Simpson, Maxie; Mary Ann Welch, Freckles; Mrs. Daniel, Dandy.

Mrs. Perk Chumley talked to the Intermediate units about outdoor safety on Thursday and most of the girls in those units completed work on their outdoor safety badges.

Friday was spent breaking up camp and many calls of "see you next year" were heard as the girls departed, many of them expressing a wish to camp all summer long!

Appreciate Gifts

The Herbert Nelson family of near Chandlerville, whose home was destroyed by fire last week, were the recipients of gifts left at the Scout office, including a suit, two boxes of children's clothing, a wool blanket and a $10 check from a Girl Scout family. They expressed their appreciation of the fine spirit evident in the organization; the gifts meant a great deal to them.

Each summer, cotton knits get better. They hold their shape; they offer brilliant colors and smart lines. Here are two examples by Smartee. Striped pullover (left) has fringe trim at sleeves and hem. The bidding in the box answers his question.

North's two spade bid is the normal forcing two and South's four heart response is designed to show exactly what he holds. A long, strong suit but no ace anywhere and no ace or king outside the heart suit.

North's five no-trump is the so-called grand slam force. It is not a Blackwood bid since South's bid has already said, "Partner, I have no aces."

It asks South to go to seven hearts if he thinks his suit is good enough and obviously it guarantees the ace of hearts and either the ace or void in all other suits.

South knows his partner holds the ace of hearts, his suit is good enough, so he bids seven.

Mrs. Mallicoat Entertains Cross Country Club

The June meeting of the Cross Country Club was held at the home of Mrs. Lawrence Mallicoat at Literberry. President Mrs. Oren Mallicoat presided; roll call was answered by naming a favorite salad.

The afternoon was spent playing bunco. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Leland McGinnis, Mrs. John McGinnis and Mary Kay McGinnis.

Refreshments were served by the hostess. The July meeting will be held at the Arcadia Hall with a family picnic. Mrs. Edward Charles will be hostess.

Plan Western Trip July 2

Five Jacksonville families will tour the western portion of the United States starting July 2 when they embark on an 18-day trailer journey.

Left to right: Jay Wiegand, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wiegand and Jacky, Mrs. Willard Cody, Mary Jo, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Ruby, Lynn and Jan, Willard Cody, Mr. and Mrs. Farrell Patterson, Roger and Ellis and cousin, Mr. and Mrs. James Welch, Retha Jo, Stevie and Jimmy Wiegand.

The Welch and Patterson families left Jacksonville June 23; the Wiegands, Codys and Rubys will leave July 2 and meet in Boone, Iowa, where five couples from Michigan will join the party.

The trip will include the Grand Teton National Park vacation area.

All ten couples will be using the same type of camper which is a trailer designed to accommodate three children and two adults.

Side trips will be taken to see the Badlands, Mt. Rushmore, Yellowstone Park and other areas of interest.

The caravan will take a different route home through Colorado.

Murrayville Maids Win Share-The-Fun

The Murrayville Merry Maids 4-H Club was selected to represent Morgan County at the Illinois State Fair at the county Share-The-Fun Festival Wednesday night at Jonathan Turner junior high school.

Their interpretation of a Tennessee dance number, authentic costumes and full club participation captured the State Fair trip and an "A" ribbon for the club.

750 Attend

More than 750 attended the county-wide contest to watch 26 4-H clubs compete for the top award.

Judy Nortrup, Stitch and Stir Club, won the competition for mistress of ceremonies. She will also represent Morgan county at the State Fair.

Judges for the contest were: Mrs. Audrey Vincent, Rushville, assistant youth adviser; John Bicket, farm adviser, Greene county; and John Martin of the Journal Courier.

Win "A" Ribbons

Clubs winning "A" ribbons were: Cheerful Seniors, Murrayville Merry Maids, Lynnville Hustlers, Berea Girls, Stitch and Stir, Chapin Top Notchers, North Side Ag, and South Side Merry Maids.

Emcees winning "A" ribbons were: Becky Bealmear, Judy Nortrup, Ronald Tomhave and Linda Mallicoat.

Robert Hayward, Jr., assistant farm adviser, and Veronika Burgess, assistant home adviser, were in charge of the festival arrangements.

Audience participation was very good, despite the heat and humidity, as the program unfolded.

A wide range of events were included in the presentations—plays, vocals, stunts and dramatic numbers.

As I See It

by E. W. BROWN

We were going to give a pep talk on the idea of July 4th ... but we've decided against it. There will be enough oratorical fireworks without our help. However, a few words about the background for this important American holiday would be appropriate here. Thomas Jefferson drafted the Declaration of Independence when he was only 33 years of age, and although he is the author of many other writings this remains his greatest literary achievement. Jefferson's first draft that he submitted to Congress was a little too radical for acceptance by that more conservative body which still hoped to effect a compromise with England that would avoid the necessity for a long war. So some deletions and changes in wording were made by John Adams and Benjamin Franklin . . . just enough changes to make the draft acceptable to the majority of the members of America's first Congress. Those were turbulent days and we today are fortunate that so many unselfish men who loved freedom were at the controls.

A learned professor claims that only humans have the brains to talk. Yes, but some of us don't have sense enough to know when to stop. But we all know that highways are dangerous on a holiday weekend. We can minimize the danger by following a few simple rules: no speeding, no drinking while driving and no driving when sleepy. Safe brakes and tires are a MUST, too. Let our dependable mechanics put your car in safe driving condition. . . . E. W. Brown, 406 South Main. Phone 5-4333.

Journey To Love

By Virginia Nielsen

© 1959 by Virginia Nielsen. Distributed by NEA Service, Inc.

XXXVI

Sam was shaking. "You can't, Grandfather! You've gone far enough. You promised there would be no more violence—"

His grandfather turned on him with bitter contempt. "Everything I've done has been for you," he cried. "I've lived my life. I'm ready to pass on my legacy to you—not only the fortune I've made, but my name. They're both in serious jeopardy now. Are you going to turn squeamish when quick action will save them both for you?"

As Sam stood in gray-faced indecision, the telephone on his grandfather's desk rang. The old man picked it up and barked, "Yes?"

As he listened, a terrible change came over him. His eyes lost their brooding eagle fierceness and were haunted.

"It's too late," he said. "The police are on their way up."

It was Sam, too, who opened the door when the knock came.

"Alex!" Kathie said, with a sob of thanksgiving. He came straight to her, and for the first time she could remember there was no humor in his lean, expressive face. Instead, it shone with undiluted relief.

"Kathie!" He caught her close and held her in the tight circle of one arm, as though he could not bear to have her farther away from him.

"Mr. Ward, you're wanted for questioning in connection with the murder of Phineas Redd," the police officer said. He spoke with reluctance, respect still tinged his manner.

The officer went on. "There's the matter of Mrs. Beatrice Powers' death on the Pali road, also. Testimony made tonight by the driver of the car that crashed into hers indicates that he was acting deliberately and under your orders."

"Absurd!" scoffed Sam's grandfather.

"There are also counts of forgery and fraud involving a certain property deed—"

Ward straightened in his chair. "You're digging deep for something to investigate. D you have a warrant for my arrest? If not, get off my property. At once!" He almost shouted.

For answer, the officer pulled a warrant out of his inner pocket. "We have the original deed," he said. "The one giving title to this property to Job Hammer and witnessed by you."

The flare of spirit died out of the old man's figure. He made a wide gesture with his hands. "Pau," he said. "Finished."

"Do you want to tell us what happened that night you and Phineas Redd and Job Hammer played poker?" Alex asked him.

"So you've got that far," Ebenezer Ward said. "Why not? Redd was a heavy loser that night. I took all his cash, then he put up his beach property and Job Hammer won it. There was a fourth player. He witnessed the deed, but he'd gone home before the quarrel began. He lost his life in a sailing accident not long after that.

"Redd sobered up a little and realized he'd been cleaned out, he began arguing that we'd cheated him. I was the hotheaded one. We fought and—I killed him.

"Job Hammer became frightened and wanted to go to the police. I told him if he did, I'd kill him. He ran away. That pointed a finger at him.

"And from that I made my fortune. I made it legitimately, too, and thought I had lived down that tragic mistake."

"Bea Powers?" Alex asked softly.

The old man nodded. "She hadn't known the truth, but she arrived at it, unfortunately, by some feminine, intuitive process of thought."

Sam shook his head in a stunned way. "The whole thing began to smell after Bea died and Kathie put her cards on the table over at Hilo. When I came back here this afternoon, I looked up the newspaper reports on that old murder and I began to suspect why Grandfather was so desperate about getting hold of that deed. He admitted everything when I threw it up to him, and I felt so sorry for him I promised to help him try to cover up as long as possible. If it could be done without involving us in another crime." He wiped his forehead again.

Kathie turned to Sam. "I believe you," she said gently. "I hope for Leilani's sake the police believe you, too."

The others went into the living room of the penthouse, and when Alex turned back from Mr. Ward's desk, he and Kathie were alone.

"Where to?" he said softly. "The Wikiwiki?"

She nodded. "If your offer of room and board is still good."

"Shall we make it your legal residence?"

"Alex, are you proposing to me?" Kathie breathed.

"I guess that's what you'd call it," he said, and his voice was unsteady. "Shall I be more formal? I adore you, Kathie! Do you love me a little?"

"Oh, Alex, darling, I love you so much!"

"Will you marry me?"

"Yes." The syllable was a faint breath against his lips before he kissed her.

A long ecstatic moment later Alex said softly, "You know I've always dreamed about a honeymoon cruise to Tahiti on the Wikiwiki. I guess I'll have to make a sailor out of you darling."

"Oh, Alex!" she laughed happily, against his cheek. "What's wrong with a honeymoon in Hawaii?"
